Spots of Color Here and There in Fashion's Realm—Like Leaves in a Forest—Tell How Near Autumn Really Is

WANAMAKER'S

"The Beginning Is Half of the Whole."—Plato.

To Baldwin, Dobson, Drexel and others, money was the emallest part. It was a man, a vision and a fixed purpose. The mind, body and soul grew in the activities of ready hands, untiring feet and unfailing courage.

The city was small and the nation of the United States was in its eighties, the same age as many of us now living. The population of Philadelphia in 1838 is recorded as

This year it numbers almost 2,000,000. The population of the United States in 1838 was 16,000,000

It is this year about 107,000,000.

One dozen brainy, clear-headed, broad-minded men, lovers f Philadelphia, enlisted for two years to devote two hours a day every day to the upbuilding of this greatest of American cities, could do wonders in adding to its wealth, prosperity and population.

Women Make Dresses From English Silk Handkerchiefs

It takes exactly four handkerchiefs to do it, and the dresses when completed are really lovely. Some women are even so enthusiastic over their success that they brought the dress in to show us.

In unique colorings and beautiful Paisley and Indian designs, the English silk handkerchiefs are used for blouses, sports hat trimmings, girdles and coverings for rubber bathing caps.

Prices range from $2.75 to $6.50 each.

Pretty New $35 Silk Dresses for Young Women

Wonderful little dresses, made of crepe de chine in brown; navy or black-the good street shades for Fall. They are designed to give the long, slender silhouette of the coming season, and the effect is heightened by fluted panels down each side of the front. The girdle is deep and fastens on the left side The graceful sleeves end in square tabs faced with a bright color.

All sizes from 14 to 20 years.

MONDAY Will Bring the First Showing of Autumn Fashions IN GOWNS COPIED DIRECTLY FROM PARIS ORIGINALS

The New Lines—The New French Materials The New Colors—And Prices Most Moderate

I XCEPT for the absence of the magic little foreign label, and the presence of a much lower price mark, any one would take these beautiful new gowns for actual Paris confections.

They express for the first time in Philadelphia many of the latest ideas of the Paris dressmakers, carried out in the original fabrics.

Here is the new wool brocade in a Renee, are striking. A third is finished wonderful red-and-gray coat-effect gown after Patou.

A dinner gown in ashes-of-rose crepeand-silver copies Lanvin.

A wonderful gold-and-brown tissue dinner gown echoes Callot; and another echo of the same dressmaker is in exquisite mauve brocaded velvet.

A dinner gown of silver-cloth that shimmers sea green at every turn-another shimmering blue and gold-an enchanting costume with long Oriental coat half lined with brilliant Persian-hued velvet-there are these and many more.

Something new and different about the lines of each. You will wish to see
