

CHURCH MESSAGE
PLEADS FOR LABOR

Declares Coal and Railway Turn-out is Due to Inadequate Pay

WOULD REFORM INDUSTRY

Washington, Aug. 29.—The Church is called upon to exert its efforts to the utmost to bring the Christian spirit of fairness and good will into the economic order, to teach Christian principles and to insist upon their application to industry, in the Labor Day Sunday message of the commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of Churches.

Fearlessly and frankly the message deals with industrial conditions during the last year. It expresses sympathy with organized labor in the coal and railway situations, saying that both are due to the inadequacy of earnings of the men. That the financial conditions of certain of the railroads may have made the reductions for their employees appear desirable, it says, adds only to the seriousness of the situation. The message declares that the shopmen are fighting for the very life of their union and that where such a war of extermination is being waged employees can expect only ultimate defeat. The message deplores more the twelve-hour working day is still in effect in the steel industry and asserts that "apparently it will require all the continued moral pressure of the complete reformation of the industry."

After pointing out that health and happiness are attainments of the higher life and that the church cannot be indifferent to the physical well-being of its people, which depends so largely on their economic status, the message declares that Christian teachings as applied to industry include three cardinal principles: the worth of personality, brotherhood, and justice. These are the principles which should be the motive of service.

Regretting that "we are still in a period where the dominant note in the industrial world is one of strife and controversy," the message says, "there probably never was a time when there was more bitterness and conflict, some of it due to misunderstanding between employers and workers and some of it unfortunately due to a very clear understanding of hostile aims and purposes."

After stating that the public is more conscious of the unpleasant and disastrous results of industrial disputes is often ignorant of the major facts and its judgment dictated by considerations of self-interest rather than of justice and right.

Many of the strikes which have occurred during the period of depression have resulted from a tendency to "deflate" labor—a tendency which in part is to be taken for granted with the recession of prices and of living costs and a corresponding deflation of the farmer.

Continuing, it says: "It cannot be too often repeated that high wages during the war were by no means so general as believed and that the demand for a reduction of wages in proportion to the reduction in living costs has been made without reference to the fact that wages prior to the war were too low and cannot fairly be taken as a basis of wage determination."

Deplored as most unfortunate the fact that no more general effort has been made to approach an settlement of disputes in a co-operative spirit and to appeal to justice and fair play rather than to trial by economic combat, the statement says, "a moral world force can settle nothing permanently. The conferences by which most disputes end would contribute much more to the stability of industrial relations if they were held at the beginning rather than at the end of a controversy."

Regretting the tendency on both sides in industry to break agreements "which indicate," the message says, "a lack of fundamental integrity which is all too prominent in the industrial world and which augurs ill for the future."

Pointing out the serious aspect of the growing hostility of organized labor to the courts, especially the lower courts, the message states, however, that the courts have been by no means uniformly hostile to labor and that the labor unions have gained much during the year before the courts. The lower courts are held largely responsible for the distrust.

The message, however, closes with the declaration that "there are distinct signs of hope and progress in the industrial situation in America." Earnest and courageous employers are at work on constructive experiments. Employers' organizations and labor unions are conquering the old psychology of fear and force and are seeking more social ends by much more social means. The workers' educational movement and the new interest of labor unions in scientific research give much promise.

A paragraph devoted to the press says: "The press, sharply criticized and often justly so, for partisanship in labor disputes, shows signs of greater fairness and disinterestedness and in some instances of moral leadership. The new role that is being played by the religious press in this connection is especially gratifying."

CENTRAL AISLE

800 "Tile" Rugs Are 50c

So many people know how good they are that we need only mention them to sell them right out!

Approximately 18x36 inches, of hand-plaited fiber, strongly bound and with block patterns of red, purple, green, dark brown and black interwoven with the natural cream color of the fiber.

Extra-Heavy White Bath Towels
19 x 36 Inches, 25c
22 x 48 Inches, 50c

Compare them with the sorts of towels usually to be had at these prices and you will quickly see the difference. These are much heavier and rougher and more absorbent. They are all white with hemmed ends. A dealer is going out of business and we got the first pick of his stock at our own price. So it is not any wonder that towels like these at 25c and 50c will make good housewives open their eyes. Limited quantity.
