

WOMAN MAY SOLVE DEATH OF BERGEN

New Witness Declares She Heard Dying Words of the Film Actor

STORY BY JEALOUS GIRL

Edgewater, N. J., Aug. 30.—A new woman witness, who is believed to have heard the last words of John Bergen, movie actor, who was killed by George A. Cline, last week, was used today by the police, they announce today.

"MYSTERY BLOND" IN FILM KILLING

MISS ALICE THORNTON Whose jealousy over John Bergen's attentions to Mrs. George Cline led her to give the information which, it is alleged, caused him to shoot his wife's admirer, Miss Thornton's identity was a mystery for several days after the shooting.

One point is of the greatest importance in this case, and that is whether there were sounds of a struggle in the room upstairs while Bergen and Cline were closeted there. Both Emil Iurillo, the main picture-maker expert, who was present, and Miss Thornton agree that there was scuffling on the floor above. Whether a struggle took place, neither knows.

him there disappeared a girl half his age, a high school student and a neighbor, who had worked in the same mill with Miller.

CLINE NOT BAD MAN, BUT SORT OF A 'NUT'

George "Chubby" Cline, who is held for the murder of Jack Bergen, film "daredevil" at Edgewater, N. J., had many peculiarities and pulled many eccentric stunts, but friends in Camden, N. J., where he was born, say he is not a "bad man," but just a sort of a "nut."

Got Rid of Her Burning Feet

Thanks to Husband's Kindness Callouses Also Peeled Right Off, and Soft Corns Faded Away!

"For many years the burning callouses on my feet nearly drove me crazy," says Mrs. Anna Beckman. "My housework was endless torture and I was compelled to wear shoes much too large to get around at all. The terrible aches and pains almost ruined my nerves. In fact, I believe I aged ten years in the past few months. Plasters, powders and medicated foot-baths did no good. But one day, thanks to my husband's kindness, he brought home a box of Gypsy Foot Relief, a secret from the desert. The very first time I used it, the burning stopped. Three days later the callouses peeled off and leaving the skin soft and smooth, while the corns between my toes just seemed to fade away. The swelling went down and I can now wear shoes two sizes smaller than the ones I had to wear when my feet were in such a awful shape. I really feel as if I had a pair of new feet, and I am telling all my friends and neighbors who have any foot troubles to use Gypsy Foot Relief."

HOUSE RULES OUT COAL AGENCY PLAN

Refuses to Consider Amendment to Distribution Bill Expected to Pass Today

HARDING TO ENFORCE LAWS

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 30.—The Anderson amendment to the Administration Coal Distribution Bill, which would permit the President to create an agency for buying and selling coal and to seize mines if, in his opinion, such a step was necessary, was thrown out in the House today on a point of order.

The coal-agency plan was first suggested by President Harding in his address to Congress, but in drafting the distribution bill the Interstate Commerce Committee abandoned it, announcing at the same time that it had acted with presidential approval.

With the killing of the Anderson amendment, Republican leaders predicted that a proposed amendment by Representative Johnson, of South Dakota, authorizing the President to take over mines and railroads would meet a similar fate and that the distribution bill would pass before adjournment.

Announcement of the plan to attach a Federal operation clause to the coal distribution bill came after it had been made known that the House yesterday that the President still held that such a grant of power was desirable in order to strengthen the Administration's hold on the coal industry, although at this time he foresaw no such grim public necessity as alone would move him to exercise this authority.

The President was said to believe that the anthracite coal industry shortly would be put on the same basis of rapid recovery in production and that the railroad situation then would be left as the only serious problem. The present Administration policy in dealing with the coal industry was said to be a strict enforcement of existing laws guaranteeing safety of life and property and maintenance of necessary public services.

Reflecting that policy, Attorney General Daugherty was completing plans today for a special Department of Justice organization to investigate alleged illegal stoppages of transportation service incident to the rail strike in the West. The organization will be headed by Attorney General Daugherty, with Hiram C. Todd, who is resigning the office of United States Attorney for Northern New York to accept the special appointment. In addition, the Attorney General has instructed all Federal District Attorneys to "vigorously prosecute" all violators of Federal Court injunctions granted to protect railroad operations and properties during the strike.

Hits "Socialistic Legislation"

Referring to White House reports that the President wants authority to take over railroads and mines and the division of Government ownership of these properties by William Jennings Bryan, Representative Rayburn, of Texas, declared during the House debate on the coal distribution bill that he did not propose to investigate all Federal District Attorneys to "vigorously prosecute" all violators of Federal Court injunctions granted to protect railroad operations and properties during the strike.

They All Watch Train Come In

The arrival of the evening train from Pottsdam, where connection is made with the main line and the outer world, is the concluding event of each day's activity in New Berlinville.

It brings back to town those who have gone to the larger places to shop or to visit. The eyes of all the village are turned to the train, every passenger alighting and passing up the long road which is the town's only street must come beneath the gaze of all its people.

From the train last night three bright, quiet, Charlie and Edith. Whence they came no one knows. Their coming was unheralded, but they had not gone a hundred feet from the station before, through the mysterious "passing along" of news, so peculiar to the country village, the whole town knew they were back. Every porch was tenanted, every eye was centered on the pair as they walked slowly up the street.

The village literally held its breath as it watched and waited. The two, each still gripping a suitcase, reached Miller's gate and bade each other a cheerful, respectful "Good evening."

Miller turned in at the gate and faced the women he had deserted for the search parties.

Hundreds of sailors and marines participated, combing over every square foot of the huge Government reservation. Patrols on shore watched the river's edge, and lookouts on the ships constantly scanned the waters about the yard, waiting for the body to appear.

While some hoped Mrs. Taylor might have slipped by the guards and wandered away, most of the navy yard's colony of officers believed she was drowned. This morning, when a tug slipped her moorings and began a move out into the river, the body came to the surface. It was seen and quickly taken ashore.

"Hello 'Chubby,'" exclaimed the private as he rushed forward with outstretched hand, forgetting his military training entirely and not making any effort to salute.

"Salute Major Cline, Private ——" roared Cline as he jumped, his feet and glared at the dumfounded private, who was struck speechless by the action of the "major."

Cline always said he held a commission in the United States Army with the camouflage section, but among his friends he often was referred to as "the movie officer."

More business is the object

Better printing is the means

When you prepare direct-by-mail advertising, the object is to get more business.

The printing you buy is not the end. Printing is the means to the end.

You, the advertiser, can concentrate on the objective—the end. Engage a printer who can produce better printing, and leave to his ability and judgment the means to the end.

If you engage a poor printer, or one who is not thoroughly capable, you will have to give your attention to both means and end—and that diverts your energy from the main objective.

Better Printing is a way to Better Business for both printer and advertiser.
