Holmes Electric System

Captures 3 Daring Robbers

Within 4 Minutes of Alarm

At 12:42 A. M. Monday the Holmes Electric Central Office installation which protects W. H. Pile & Sons, Inc., Wholesale Druggists, of 245 S. 6th street, flashed an alarm to the Holmes Office at 812 Chestnut Street.

Three guards were dispatched instantly in an automobile and found the front door forced. Two entered there and one went to the rear. They found three desperate men hard at work rolling barrels of alcohol on to the elevator ready to remove. The guards held up their men at the pistol point and forced them to the street. They signalled the Holmes Office that the capture had been effected just four minutes after the alarm had rung. The police were called and the captives handed over to the authorities.

Two men were held in $15,000 bail each, the third was wanted by the police for holding up a motorist with a gun and was held for $17,500.

It is protection such as this that Holmes Electric gives to subscribers. Trained men, adequate for any situation, are instantly dispatched to the scene of every alarm, no matter what the cause. So successful has Holmes Electric Protection proved to be in over half a century of service that Philadelphia business men agree that:
