Nancy Wynne Tells of Newport's Pageant Held Last Night-She Sees Mrs. Thomas Newhall in Striking Costume—Other Matters

THE pageant at Newport last ere-ning, given on the grounds of the Point on the Elk River, Md. Art Association, was exquisite. The pageant followed closely Longfellow's "Viking or Skeleton in Armor," and the costumes and graceful poses of the ners will not soon be forgotten. Mrs. Frank Freuauff, of New York, wrote the scenario, and Mrs. Eustis Corcoran, of Washington, arranged Several prominent men from Boston's choral societies went to Newport for the affair and sang choruses and sextettes. Mrs. Graham, who is prominent in affairs artistic as well as social in Newport, conceived the idea and directed it all. You know Mrs. Graham was Miss Margaret McCall Thayer, a sister of General Thayer and cousin of Sydney, Harry Thayer and the rest of that family. Her daughter Peggy was married at their Newport home late in June of this year. Maria, the eldest daughter, is the wife of Riccardo Zimmermann and lives in Chestnut Hill, where Mrs. Graham makes her winter home.

To go back to the pageant, the Theatre Guild clips were painted by Howard Hilder and the Theatre Guild lantern was used. It was a perfectly gorgeous thing altogether. And Miss Longfellow, granddaughter of the poet, was honor guest of the occasion. In fact, there seems to have been nothing left out to make it all a splendid af-

Varick Frissell, of Baltimore, was the Viking. He is strikingly handsome and made a fine picture. Mrs. Marion Eppley, of New York, was the queen.
Laura Biddle, the Craig Biddles' daughter, was the "maiden" of the poen. In the scene which depicted the youth of the Viking, young Arthur poen. In the scene which depleted for the Viking, young Arthur Hughes, who is the son of the Rev. Stanley Hughes, of Newport, took the part, and "the child" was Roxanne Belknap. Katherine Morris, the Harrison Morrises' daughter, gave two specialty dances, an Indian and a barbaric She is very graceful and wears dance. She is very graceful a wonderfully smart costumes. wonderfully smart costumes.

Some of those who occupied boxes for the evening were Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Craig Biddle, Mrs. Henry Barton Jacobs, Mrs. Harrison Morris, Mrs. Townsond, Rusden, Mrs. Stuart

Mrs. Townsend Burden, Mrs. Stuart Duncan, Mrs. Elisha Dyer, Mrs. Wil-Duncan, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Joseph M. Gazzam, Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer, Mrs. Charles Hillhouse, Mrs. John Thayer and ever so many others. A large costume ball followed. TOLD you when Mrs. Tom Newhall came back from Europe we would see some stunning clothes. Blackwell Newhall knows how to dress just about as well as anybody else in this town, and a great deal better than most of us. Well, I saw her on Seventeenth street yesterday, and I made no teenth street yesterday, and I made no mistake in my prediction. She was wearing a frock of soft gray crepe de chine, made with the new long draped lines, and the back of the bodice was in a sort of cape effect, which formed a part of the sleeves. There was a touch of violet purple somewhere about the gown, and the hat was a large street.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Davidson, of New York, are visiting their mother, Mrs. C. Davidson, of 2017 Mount Vernon street. model of gray of the exact same shade as the dress and had a large purple relvet flower at one side of the front, of the crown, raised rather high. It's a bit hard to describe, but it was simply It's onderful to see, and Mrs. Newhall with her wavy gold hair and splendid carriage, was the cynosure of all eyes.

AND, speaking of smart costumes, A Emley Cook Wright is wearing a white homespun frock bound in black and a small black straw hat. You can't think how good looking it is, and becoming, too. The Witney Wrights have a cottage at Cape May, you know. and Witney and Emley are much interested in the ball to be given down there DLEANOR is a lovely girl and very E pretty and attractive, but heaven of hair. As it is easy to remedy such deficiencies, she has managed to worry along, without, however, taking all her friends and admirers into her confidence on the matter. Imagine her feelings the other day when, descending to the drawing room to greet a suitor, she heard him ask small sister: "If I get You a doll, do you want it to have long curls like yours?" S. S. replied thoughtfully: "You know, I b'lieve I'd raver have one wiv hair you could take off and put on like El'nor's." NANCY WYNNE.
