Nancy Wynne Talks of the Mudd-Hartshorne Wedding Today—She Hears of Dances in September and October—Other Bits of Interest

BESIDES the tennis, we have Emily Hartshorne's wedding to Stewart Mudd today, so you see my words that things social are looking up are proved, what with a dance last Friday night and the Coxe-Sewell wedding on Saturday, and the weddings next Saturday of Adelaide Newlin and Bill Paul and Dorothy Barnes and Mr. Newton.

Emily Hartshorne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ned Hartshorne, of Haverford, and her marriage takes place at the Church of the Redeemer today. Mr. and Mrs. Mudd, the bridegroom's father and mother, arrived from the West last week, and Emily's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Sharpless, gave a tea for them on Sunday afternoon at Green Hills Farms. Last evening Mr. and Mrs. S. Burns Weston, who are Emily's uncle and aunt on her father's side of the family, gave a supper-dance at the Merion Golf Club for the bridal party after the rehearsal.

The bride of today is a great-granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Borie, who lived for many years at 1002 Spruce street and at the Dell in Torresdale, the property now owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Fox. She is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mauran Rhodes, who lived formerly in Ardmore, but have moved to Los Angeles, Calif., and who celebrated their golden wedding there about two years ago.

I DECLARE, I can't get over how grown-up the girls are this season, compared with the debs of the last three years. It gives me the queerest feeling. I was out at the tennis one day, and just ahead of me I saw two very stately ladies dressed in black with long skirts, trailing veils and feathers, and I thought, "I wonder who those ladies are," and then they turned around, and if they weren't Tish Landreth and Fran Bicknell. Looking so grown-up as to clothes and so young as to faces! Letitia was dressed in a black satin gown embroidered in bands of light blue with little gold strands running through the embroidery. Her hat was a large affair of black velvet, I think, and from its wide brim flared a long lace veil. Frances wore a frock of black canton crepe with draperies at the sides and she had long black earrings. Her hat was a small affair of iridescent black trimmed down to the right shoulder with a sweeping feather. They looked stunning!

I HEAR the Emory McMichaels will give a dance on the 22d of the month at Knoll House, their place in Devon, for their daughter, Ellen McMichael. Ellen came out last year and had a mighty good time. She is a cousin of Ellen Harrison, who is to make her debut this season. The two Rowland girls, Esther and Dorothy, are also cousins of Ellen Harrison, and their aunt, Mrs. Walter Wood, who is likewise their guardian, will introduce them this season unless her plans have changed since the early summer.

SPEAKING of changed plans, I told you the other day that the Boyles had decided not to give a tea for Marguerite. Well, the J. Donaldson Paxtons have also changed their plans, and instead of a tea will present Myra at a dance at the Merion Cricket Club on Friday evening, October 20. The cards of the William Paxton, 3ds, will go out with the invitations. Mrs. William Paxton was Marion Henshaw, you remember. They live with the Donaldson Paxtons at St. Davids. Myra is an attractive girl and will have a good time, I am sure. She is a cousin of the Harmar Dennys, of Pittsburgh, and of the J. N. du Barrys, of this city.

IT WAS a rainy, restless day when mother conceived the idea of quieting her two hopefuls by setting them to work in the cellar, piling kindling wood. Indeed, she offered several five-cent pieces for the work, so Joe and Jack, aged five and seven, went heartily at it. The kindling wood was a bit fractious, however, and would fall down often. That evening when the two pajamaed lads were ready to get into bed mother came in to assist at prayers. What was her amazement when Joe remarked: "We are not going to say prayers tonight." "No, we are not," added Jack. "But why not, dears?" "Well, we were fixing the wood in the cellar and it would fall down and it would fall down, and we prayed and prayed and God let it fall just the same; so we won't say prayers tonight." It looked like a deadlock for a moment, till Jack, seeing the anxious look in mother's eyes, crumpled and said, "Well, Joey, let's us do it, after all; let's say our prayers and so return good for evil."

MISS HARTSHORNE BRIDE OF DR. STUART MUDD

Wedding Took Place in Bryn Mawr at Noon

A wedding of interest to this city and the West took place at noon today in the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, Bryn Mawr, when Miss Emily B. Hartshorne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erward Yarnall Hartshorne, of Haverford, became the bride of Dr. Stuart Mudd, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey G. Mudd, of St. Louis, Mo. The church was decorated wit gladioli, palms and ferns. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Francis Hartshorne, an uncle of the bride, assisted by the Rev. George Calvert Carter, rector of the church. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in the gown of ivory white heavy canton crepe richly embroidered, which was worn by her mother on her wedding day. It was gracefully draped, with a long court train. Her veil of rare old lace, which belonged to her great-grandmother, was arranged in a coronet effect, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses, lilies of the valley and orchids. Miss Esther Burns Weston, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a frock of peach colored chiffon and crepe, with a large picture hat of black velvet, faced with peach colored chiffon. She carried a bounuet of delphinium and pink roses. Miss Clementina R. Hartshorne, as sister of the bride, preceded the bridesmaids. She wore a frock of turquoise blue crepe, veiled with peach color chiffon, and a large picture hat of black velvet, trimmed with silver and faced with peach color chiffon. She carried pink roses and delphinium. The bridesmaids included Miss Anna C Sharpe, of Berwyn, Miss Jeannette Willard, Miss Carol Weiner, Miss Mary R. Dodge, cousin of the bride, Miss Laura Carter and Miss Carol Lawrence. They were attired alike in frocks of turquoise blue crepe, with flowing sleeves of pink chiffon and black velvet hats faced with blue chiffon and trimmed with silver ribbons. They also carried bouquets of delphinium and pink roses. Mr. Seeley Greenleaf Mudd, of Los Angeles, Calif., a cousin of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers included Mr. Boudinot H. Atterbury, of New York; Mr. Stuart BBenton Clark, of anesville, O.; Mr. John Shepley and Mr. Samuel Becker Grant, of St. Louis, Mr.; Mr. Russell Wood, of New Bedford; Mr. Charles H. Weston, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. Harold F. Weston, of St. Huberts, N. Y.; Mr. Charles Hartshorne, of Phoenixville and Dr. Isaac Stair, r., of this city.

A large reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Hartshorne, mother of the bride, wore a gown of silver gray chiffon, with a cape of black point lace, and a large black velvet hat trimmed with black and gray plumes. The bridegroom's mother wore brown and gold chiffon.

North Philadelphia

SPANISH characteristics and tastes in furniture, during the 16th and 17th centuries, reflected early Moorish attachment to restriction in the number of articles employed.

The consequent necessity for wide spaces added to dignity and served to enhance the dominance of the two significant items of Spanish Renaissance always found in the home—the chest and Vargueno Cabinet.

The scarcity of movable objects was not due to lack of money, but to a desire for decorative balance, demanding that each piece stand alone with nothing to detract from its individual effect.

Valiant interiors are today a pleasing study in balance and harmony, wherein the character and refinement of the furnishings are enhanced by walls and draperies.

Carefully chosen offerings, plus a service which will plan and execute the decorative scheme desired, attracts to Valiant's those who seek the most in individuality and effect at moderate cost.

You are most cordially invited to inspect the different departments of Valiant's, where a service ever courteous and helpful will offer you suggestions and assist you in making your selection.
