Is love hereditary? Can the love of grandparents be transmitted to their grandchildren? How long can unfulfilled love last?

These were the questions which tormented charming, vivacious little Elinor Jermyn.

Many minutes had passed since the appointed hour for the wedding. The congregation whispered nervously. The bridegroom's anxiety grew. The best man tried to look easy and unconcerned when the sexton slipped a brief note into his hand.

It was all off. She simply could not go through with the wedding. That was all Elinor had said.

Months ago she had seen a stranger in the little churchyard of the deserted village. She answered his look of compelling adoration with a strange, unconscious yearning. Somehow they knew that for years and years and years they had loved each other.
