

By Sidney Smith

THE MYSTERY GIRL

A Fascinating Romance of Baffling Plot and Throbbing Love Interest By CAROLYN WELLS

THIS BEGINS THE STORY John Waring, gentleman and scholar, was out with his dog, pointed out the evidence of a certain crime...

fer in charge, went straight to work in a most business-like way. He examined the body of John Waring...

WHEN Lockwood returned to the study, he found the medical examiner and Doctor Greenfield in consultation. The examiner was a large, pompous-looking man...

"I don't know—that struck me as queer," said Greenfield. "What is it, Doctor Marsh?"

"That is what puzzles me," returned Doctor Marsh. "As you can clearly see the wound was inflicted with a sharp instrument. The mark was about an inch below the right eye. The angle of the wound was peculiar, and he died of death. A pleura of nerves was pierced also, and this fact doubtless rendered the victim unconscious at once. I mean as soon as the stab wound was made, though he may have been alive for a few minutes thereafter."

"I am not the examiner," the secretary said, and he folded his arms and leaned against the corner of the great mantelpiece. "But since you ask me, I will repeat that there was no sign of blood on this room last night, and that necessarily the case is a suicide."

"I don't see how you can be so sure," said Doctor Greenfield. "I know Doctor Waring very well, and he was never the least nervous. I would expect to find him in the position of the present case, when he was looking forward to high honors in the college and also expected to marry a charming lady."

"I don't see how you can be so sure," said Doctor Greenfield. "I know Doctor Waring very well, and he was never the least nervous. I would expect to find him in the position of the present case, when he was looking forward to high honors in the college and also expected to marry a charming lady."

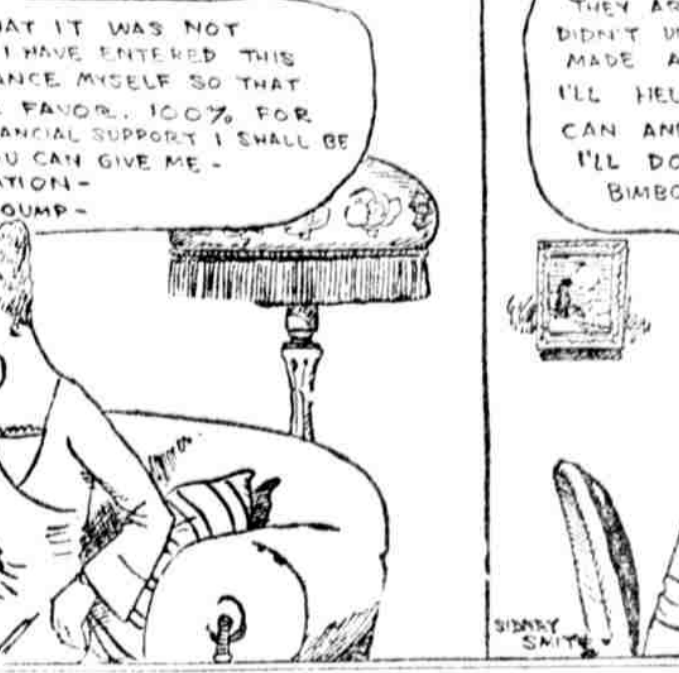

"I don't see how you can be so sure," said Doctor Greenfield. "I know Doctor Waring very well, and he was never the least nervous. I would expect to find him in the position of the present case, when he was looking forward to high honors in the college and also expected to marry a charming lady."

"I don't see how you can be so sure," said Doctor Greenfield. "I know Doctor Waring very well, and he was never the least nervous. I would expect to find him in the position of the present case, when he was looking forward to high honors in the college and also expected to marry a charming lady."

"I don't see how you can be so sure," said Doctor Greenfield. "I know Doctor Waring very well, and he was never the least nervous. I would expect to find him in the position of the present case, when he was looking forward to high honors in the college and also expected to marry a charming lady."

"I don't see how you can be so sure," said Doctor Greenfield. "I know Doctor Waring very well, and he was never the least nervous. I would expect to find him in the position of the present case, when he was looking forward to high honors in the college and also expected to marry a charming lady."

THE GUMPS—One Sure Vote for Andy

SOMEBODY'S STENOG—The Awful Moment Arrives

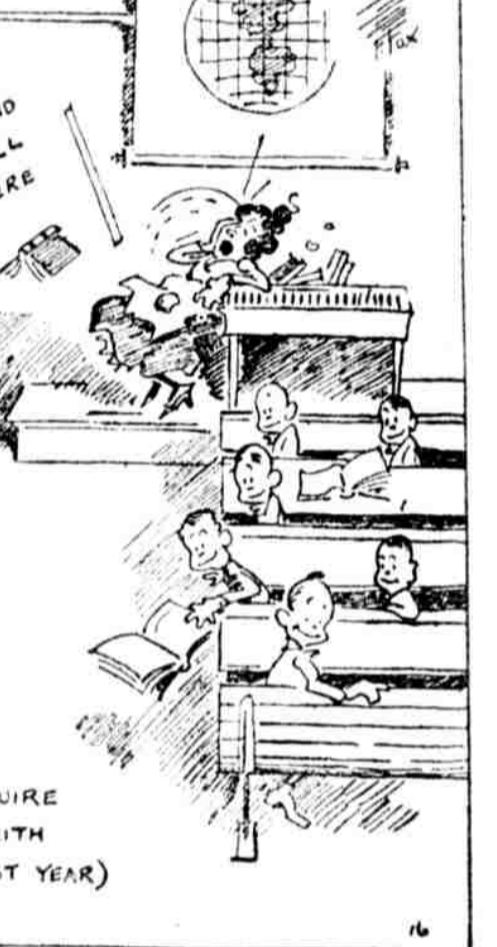

The Young Lady Across the Way

MICKEY (HIMSELF) MCGUIRE

SCHOOL DAYS

UP IN THE BELFRY

PETEY—It's Fine When It's On

GASOLINE ALLEY—Storage $5 and Costs

THERE'S NOTHING LEFT TO STEAL

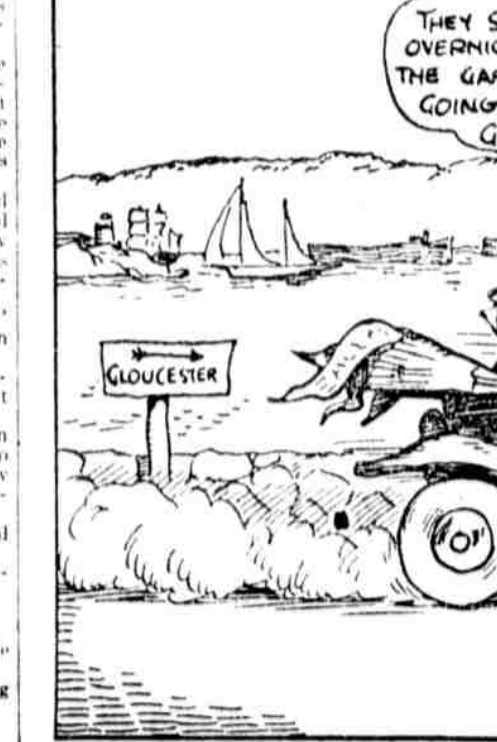

DOWN ALL FIGHTERS!

AND NEXT MORNING

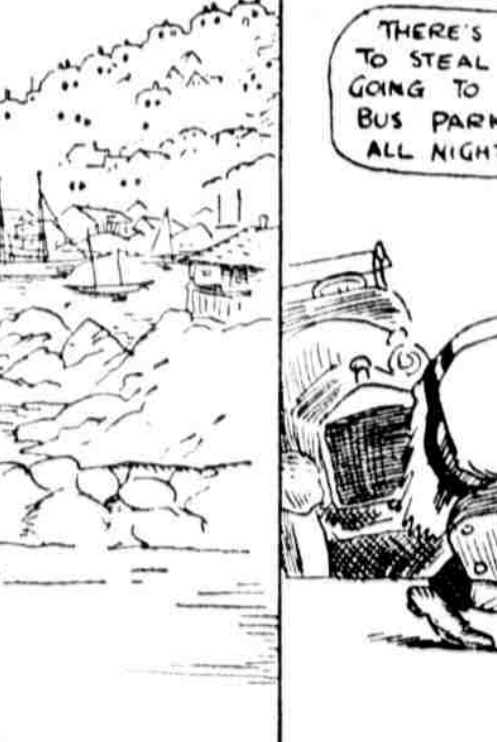

CONTINUED MONDAY

CONTINUED MONDAY

CONTINUED MONDAY

CONTINUED MONDAY

CONTINUED MONDAY

