

MYSTERY WOMAN AT BRYSON'S TRIAL

Enters Court Heavily Veiled, and Is Recognized by Accused's Attorney TO COMPLETE JURY TODAY

Huntingdon, Pa., Sept. 19. — Dr. Herbert Bryson, formerly a Washington physician and war hero, was placed on trial for his life here yesterday on the charge of murdering Mrs. Helen Irene Haines, who deserted her husband and lived clandestinely in the mountain village of Cumville.

A few minutes before the trial opened a heavily veiled woman entered the courtroom by a rear door and took a seat a few feet from the defendant. Dr. Bryson looked at the woman, but failed to identify her for the defense smiled and bowed to the mysterious visitor. She returned the salutation.

Dr. Bryson's aged mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Bryson, and his sister, Mrs. Laura R. Randall, who were in the courtroom an hour before the case was called, said they did not know her identity. Attorneys for the Commonwealth admitted that they did not know the woman and could not tell if she would be called as a witness in behalf of the physician.

She is believed to be the mysterious veiled woman who has called at the prison several times with magazines for the prisoner, but has refused to visit when Dr. Bryson was brought into the courtroom he was leaning heavily on the arm of a court officer. The physician has aged greatly and his dark hair is now almost entirely gray. He dragged his left leg as he walked across the room and took a seat in a chair directly in front of his mother.

Seated on the first row of the section reserved for spectators was Kenneth Barnsley, of Washington, a close friend of Bruce Haines, the Washington chauffeur whom Mrs. Helen Irene Haines deserted for Dr. Bryson. He said that Haines was expected to attend the trial. Yesterday's session was taken up with the selection of jury men and it is expected the panel will be completed today.

Letters to the Editor

Money Evil at Root of Trouble

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—The query of "Schuykill" and others as to the cause of our economic troubles ought to be continually raised until we not only find but adopt the remedy. It exists. That fruit rots in the orchards while many in the cities go hungry is due to transportation and distribution costs and to the fact agreement not to put the prices down because the city people would not eat greatly more anyhow. If we can simultaneously improve transportation and distribution, we can displace some of the men engaged and relieve consumers from the cost of supporting them. They could become producers if they could get access to the land.

Here, then, is the basic trouble. The land is owned mostly by those who do not farm it. They rent it and hold it for higher prices. They live off its income they do not earn. In my lifetime farm values in the corn belt have not fallen. They are up about $500 not per acre but per year. It is purely to speculation and the expectation of unearned increment. The curve of rising land values cannot go up forever. It must stop. It should stop. Otherwise it means a cataclysm like the fall of Rome or the French Revolution. Will we be wise enough to stop it before it is too late? I doubt it. The remedy is for the State to take all the unearned increment from land and its wealth. This would include the coal royalties, which have climbed from twenty-five cents per ton to a dollar and more in a very few years.

Closely tied to the land problem are the rights of way, terminals, etc., used in transportation. The people should pay for them once and stop paying dividends, interest, etc., on them every year. As the business grows, the value of these things is marked up, and the rates raised so as to pay "reasonable earnings." The mythology of filling a leaky tub or rolling a stone up an endless hill were sales compared with the tasks of paying interest on ever-increasing values and debts.

The third great evil is money. It was invented and developed to facilitate business. But, like the other two, it is monopolized and the business man who needs it must pay a useless and unearned profit to those who get it from the government and pass it down to him. Few people have studied this simple process, confused as it is by those who profit from it, but it is very simple. So profitable is it that men in all ages have taken advantage of their brethren by monopolizing money. A simple illustration will show the facts. Two honest, thirty brothers begin life by working and saving. Tom keeps his savings in money form ("liquid") and lends at interest. Jim invests his

Queries of Varied Type

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—Would you please tell me as much as you can about Mr. Durant, the builder of the present Durant and the coming Star and Flint automobiles? Was he not one of the best of the cadillacs, Oldsmobile and Buick cars? Did he not leave the American Motors Corporation when the four Post people bought it? What connection did Leland and a Mr. Coleman have with the Cadillac car?

Two more questions, if I am not monopolizing too much space. Will rubbing vaseline on the strings of a tennis racket aid in preventing the strings from breaking? Is it necessary to take solid geometry in high school to enter a college? Is there any woman's college that does not require that if you have already had it, you will not have to take it to enter? Will you name some that do not require it? R. B. Pottsville, Pa., September 12, 1922.

William Crapo Durant was born in Boston, Mass., December 8, 1861. In 1886 he founded the Durant-Hart Carriage Company, of Flint, Mich., where he had received a public school education. Organized the Buick Motor Company in 1908 and the General Motors Company in 1916. He secured a controlling interest in the General Motors Company in 1915 and the same year organized the Cadillac Oldsmobile Buick Motor Company in 1916. He held controlling interest in two last-named companies until 1920, in January of which year he resigned. Durant, present home in New York City. Henry Marjory Leland founded the Cadillac Motor Company in 1904 and was general manager until 1910, then president and advisory manager. There is no mention of "Mr. Coleman" in the data concerning the Cadillac accessible to the Forum, but there is a R. L. Collins, who is at present associated with General Motors.

Vaseline would be more harmful than good used on the strings of tennis racket. There is a variety which you sporting goods store can furnish you that will accomplish the results for which you ask. An agreement entered into a few years ago by leading colleges of the country, those for women included, standardized the requirements for matriculation in any of them. These requirements included previous study of geometry, plane and solid. If there are women's colleges which dispense with these preliminary studies for entrance, they are not parties to the agreement mentioned and their rank is probably lower than those which make it essential to matriculation.

Poems and Songs Desired "Down on the Farm" To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—I am sending you the chorus of "Down on the Farm." I used to sing it about twenty years ago. Will you please print it in the People's Forum, and maybe somebody will send in the first and second verses. I have a good lot of old-time songs from your Forum. I look for the People's Forum every night, and then the funny picture.

The People's Forum will appear daily in the Evening Public Ledger. The name in the Standard Edition of the Standard Edition. "Make It a Habit" — Ad.

The chorus to "Down on the Farm" is as follows: Just a field of new-mown hay; Just a cottage by the way; Just a mother dear to shield me from all harm. Just a sweetheart waiting, too, With a love that's fond and true; Just a dear old-fashioned country home down on the farm. MRS. L. B. SANDT, Philadelphia, September 14, 1922.

"Sweetheart" To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—Inclosed please find original lines, which you may print in the People's Forum if you see fit. JOHN CIPOLLI, Jr., Philadelphia, September 14, 1922.

Tonight as I sit by my window And gaze through the iron bars, I see the moon and the stars, And the bright shining stars. And the old moon makes me lonesome As I watch the clouds roll by, And I want you, and you only, That is why I sigh. And I sigh because I wonder Will you sometimes think of me, That is why I sigh and ponder, Always thinking, dear, of thee. Will you love me when I'm old, dear, When my hair turns silvery gray And my eyes have lost their luster, And I'm no longer young and gay? I do not wish to doubt you, Nor do I think you'll turn, But I cannot live without you, My heart for your heart yearns. So, dearest one, I trust thee, And my heart to you I give, And if you should ever break that trust I would not care to live.

Why Teeth Discolor Food and smoke stains lodge in film A way has been found to beautify teeth, to make them whiter, cleaner, safer. Millions now employ it. You see the results wherever you look. Countless teeth glisten which once were dim. These effects come by combating film. They are coming to careful people the world over, largely through dental advice. If you don't know this new-day method, we urge you to make this test. Film makes teeth dingy You can feel on your teeth a viscous film. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. The ordinary tooth paste cannot effectively combat it. So brushing teeth in old ways leaves much of that film intact. Film absorbs stains from food, smoke, etc. Then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film. That is why teeth lose their luster. Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film. Under old brushing methods, those troubles constantly increased. Nearly everybody suffered. Now ways to fight film Dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight film. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it. Thus the film is day by day combated, and without using harmful grit. Able authorities have amply proved these methods. Now leading dentists everywhere advise them. Careful people of some fifty nations now enjoy the benefits. A new-type tooth paste has been created, based on modern research. The name is Pepsodent. These two great film combatants are embodied in it for daily application. Other essentials Modern research also proves that other effects are essential, and Pepsodent brings them. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth, which may otherwise ferment and form acids. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize the acids which cause decay. Old-time tooth pastes, based on soap and chalk, decreased these vital factors. Pepsodent, with every use, gives manifold power to these tooth-protecting forces in the mouth. It also polishes teeth so film less easily adheres. In all these ways, Pepsodent is fast inaugurating a new dental era.

Delightful results in a week The results of Pepsodent are so quick and apparent that a very short test reveals them. One week will generally show effects amazing and delightful. Those effects will be convincing. You will realize that you need them, and that your children need them. They mean that the great tooth enemies are now effectively combated. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Then decide by what you see and feel, by the results that old ways never brought. This is too important to neglect. Cut out the coupon now.
