THE MOVIE FAN'S LETTERBOX

By HENRY M. NEELY

"Twenty-one" writes: "I used to think perhaps I was 'franky' about the pictures I saw—hard to suit—but one day I discovered the Letter Box and was delighted to find that there are others who think like I do, others who like the players I like and the kind of pictures I like. I won't trouble you with those I dislike, because I think Gloria's fair name has been wiped in the dust enough."

"I have failed to see honorable mention of Florence Vidor. I always go to see her pictures and enjoyed her immensely in 'Hail the Women' and 'The Girl Who Sings'. I just hate to have these old pictures dug up, but I want to ask your readers if any of them have seen 'Barbery Sheep' with Elsie Ferguson. This is a picture I have never forgotten, although I saw it about five years ago. This was the first time I ever saw Elsie Ferguson, and from that time on became a Ferguson fan. I don't think I saw 'Queen of the Mountain'. Awful was no name for it. What say your readers?"

"Naturally 'Barbery Sheep' was the first picture in which you ever saw Elsie Ferguson, because it was the first one she ever made. And it was a corker. I'm an admirer. I wouldn't include it among the best ten since films began."

"If you have never seen 'honorable mention' of Florence Vidor here, you must be a very recent Letter Box reader. She is one of my most violent enthusiasts—one of the fondest things I'm of, in fact."

"Tom" writes: "My friend kicked the ashes from one of my cigars onto the Wilton."

"Tom," he began, "it has been suggested that Heaven is a place where every time you go into a movie the feature is just about to start, which possibly presents the difference between a celestial and a cosmic state in its most desirable, if most improbable, mood."

"Very often people fail to enjoy a picture because they come into the theatre during the middle of the picture, and don't know where the story is being told. Some people, however, like this—usually the ones who read the last page of a book first. Some would make considerable money from a device that would bring all people into a movie at the beginning of the show. The only objection would be that some select persons who were used to interesting parts of the film to crawl on your toes to a seat in the middle of the row."

"I've chased his slim legs onto the pavement table and continued: 'In the infant days of the movies, the people who were used to select persons who were used to interesting parts of the film to crawl on your toes to a seat in the middle of the row.'"

"I'm surprised recently to see a serial movie in a Chestnut street house. In the infant days of the movies, the people who were used to select persons who were used to interesting parts of the film to crawl on your toes to a seat in the middle of the row."

"I think he's right. The serial has always been surveyed in the negative, but aren't there some possibilities in the serial form?"

"Laurel writes: 'Had the very good fortune to drop in and see Constantine in 'The Wonderful Thing.' This evening, it was pleasing to find Constantine was the damask rose of the picture. I'm sure that the story is a wonderful one. I would almost say that she is the 'American Beauty.' I always did think that Constantine is a wonderful soul, for her heart is in the highest in our eyes guided in the judgment. She has that part" ending essence of charm and all that it means; the sub-title editor in this story is an expert and he added much to the zest of it. The two old beans as types could not be improved upon. But Oh! Henry—Constantine—just let the wonderful thing?"

"I would like to say one thing more. In 'Blondie' it seems to be the fashion to label the British nobility as the aristocracy. We wish that loved name could be personalized so that vengeance might be wreaked for the abuse (not in this light necessarily) of it. So are many among us in this great democracy. An aristocrat is a person with the finest and most sensitive 'set' of feelings—and all that this implies—good taste, etc."

"Henry, old dear, you ought to see 'The Wonderful Thing.' 'I have chosen this as a delicacy for you. Eat that.' No, no, no, no."

Oh, a couple of weeks ago, I did see 'The Wonderful Thing,' and I liked it. Only Constantine's friends must have been sick the night I saw it because they substituted her sister, Norma. But Norma did well. I thought, Oh, yes, and a couple of more weeks. Norma did very well. In fact a couple of trays, pa."

Joan comes in with a spirited attack on 'Kensington Lillies' for his splendor of attack on this column. I don't think that part of Joan's letter, because it would be too unkind to K. I. and too kind to me. But I'm glad Joan doesn't want me to be a 'very serious school teacher.' Their logic outflows."

"Give me the genuine, emotional news and actresses. Then let Gloria"
