

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of the Horse Show—She Sees Interesting Persons and Interesting Clothes at Out-of-Doors Affairs

"GOODNESS, look at Teddy F.— Is that Teddy F.—? Yes, it is, but my dear when did he start growing a moustache? Isn't he killing?" On a look at that marvelous costume that she is wearing in the George Thayer's car. If she'd only turn around, so I could see who she is, and a few more remarks you could see on all sides at the horse show yesterday.

I SAW Florence Crozer at Bryn Mawr on Wednesday looking perfectly sweet. She wore a frock of dark blue crepe with a black silk braided and a close-fitting turban of black and white Egyptian effect to the hat. Florence has lovely light hair and blue eyes. Her parents will take her here at a ball on the twelfth of December. They have been living most of the time in New York since Mona's marriage, but Florence will take in most of our debutante parties here.

ANOTHER debutante dance was given last night. This time the little ball to be introduced was Elizabeth Wilson, whose first name is Marion, you know. There are two Elizabeths, both however, spells the Wilson with one l and the other, the daughter of Mr. Robert N. Wilson, uses two l's. Elizabeth Wilson, who was introduced last night, is the daughter of Mr. Percy Hartshorn Wilson. The dance was given at the Wilson's country place, Longview, Devon, and there were about twenty hundred and fifty there, principally of the debutante set. Elizabeth wore a lovely frock of orchid-colored chiffon artistically draped and finished at the side of the long waistline with a huge bow. The frock had touches of blue velvet and she carried a darling bouquet of sunset roses. Mrs. Wilson looked very well in a gown of black sequins.

WHILE aware that all of us are fallible and likely to make mistakes even about those with whom we have played as children, I wonder if you will not agree with Nancy that there is nothing more unpleasant than an anonymous letter. When a person writes to Nancy calling attention to a mistake, it seems hardly worth while to answer the correction when that person is unwilling to substantiate the statements by signing his or her name. Nancy writes in a kindly spirit. She does not criticize individuals, nor does she like scandal in any form. Also she has heard of several occasions of late she has heard she has been impersonated in telephone calls and in other ways, and would like to take this opportunity to say that she never telephoned under that name and that no one has authority to do so; that she does not wish information on scandals and mean gossip; that any such communication she always has found their way to the scrap basket and always will, and so saying she will now pass on to other things.

HAVE you noticed the dresses of serge and pique twill which are embroidered all over in a contrasting color? Not only are they embroidered all over, but they represent a wall-paper pattern. I saw two such frocks at the horse show this week. One had a background of dark blue and little Japanese pagodas, bridges, trees, grass and small figures in single threads of light gray were embroidered over the entire surface. It was something like the "yellow plate" pattern and another was of dark blue with a similar Chinese design in hona thread. Indeed, the embroidery seemed a reproduction of the walls of China; as one young woman remarked: "If looked as if it were carried a great weight of stone." The other dress was of a similar pattern, but the design was of a punny, either, for that matter. This description makes the gowns seem so popular, I know, and so they were, but very striking and unusual.

THE spoiled young neighbor across the way had come to spend the afternoon with sister, and mother happened along during the following conversation: "Sister, I wanted to say that I'm going to the movies yesterday, but mother would not let me." And in accents of deep surprise the spoiled young neighbor, who always had what she wanted and the mother of her own, asked: "Well, didn't you say?"
