

When League Champions Meet in World Series This Year a Battle of Strategists Will Be Waged

"Little Napoleon" Has Advantage Over Midget Manager Because of Board of Strategy—National League Chief's Advisers Are Clever Guessers

STRATEGY is a form of mental gymnastics that a man must learn the trick of if he hopes to succeed in any sport. It requires the ability to outguess an opponent. That sounds easy, but isn't it? Remember the old kid trick of loading a penny in the palm of your hand and having a schoolmate guess whether it is head or tail? The youngster who succeeded at that game was a Napoleon or a M. McGraw in embryo. He made it look first, should he change it or keep it head? The success with which he gauged the mental processes of his opponent measured his success at the game.

That is the basis of strategy—the ability to guess what your opponent is going to do, and then, naturally, to do something else.

It is no small part of baseball, this strategy. It isn't the waddy trick of people who want to make the game seem more intricate than it really is. Strategy is an absolute necessity. A midget manager can make a fool out of the larger team that wags its tail at the end of the season.

John McGraw, the pitching staff on his high-prize list of Brooklyn favorites that would bring tears to the eyes of most managers. Not by following those favorites, by guessing at the right moment when they were due to pitch, he led to the 1922 pennant.

That is strategy of a higher order than guessing an opponent, for he was outguessing the management and strength of his own team.

THE BULL BULLY, McGraw, is a man who has a head and a brain. He is a strategist in the truest sense of the word. He is a man who has a head and a brain.

MURRAY BROTHERS SUCCEED IN RING

Tommy, Bantam, Has Met Many Stars in Four Years' Boxing Career

Tommy Murray, although he has just finished his twenty-first birthday, has been actively engaged in the ring about four years. When he first started to box, Tompkins had to go out of town to get his lessons. Local promoters tried to give him a chance to display his talents.

Being outpointed stopped for a while in the game for the youthful Murray, but as his skill improved, Tommy began to win some fights. Among the opponents are some of the best bantams in America, his record including more than 100 bouts.

How Does It Strike You?

Neutral Linesmen Boston Backfire Polo Sportsmanship. By THE OBSERVER

ONE of the apparently insignificant changes in the football rules for this season is the one which grants to the referee the power of selecting the men who hold the sticks for the head linesman.

This doesn't affect the game and means nothing to the spectators. But it does reflect the kind of man of considerable worth.

Heretofore custom has dictated that members of opposing squads hold the sticks and they were like chained tigers tugging, at either end of the head.

When the territory had to be measured with first down at stake the linesman in carrying out the chain would feel a tug here and a tug there. His fingers would slip. Inches would be given away and sometimes inches measured.

These young collegians with their spirit aroused by the thrills of the game very often lost their heads and tried to take advantage by edging up a few inches. These conditions caused the officials annoyance. It was Al Sharpe who first broke away from tradition.

At the Army-Navy game last season he went to Coach Foley and Bob Foyell and told them he was going to select neutral aides for the head linesman. The rival tutors offered no objection.

The proposal for this change was made at the next meeting of the Rules Committee and the lawmakers immediately saw the advisability of the change. It is now up to the referee to make arrangements for the two men to carry the measuring sticks.

THE change eliminates both teams from any part of the government of the game. Neither the referee, umpire, field judge, head linesman nor his aides have had or have any affiliation with the institutions represented by the contesting teams.

The Snag of Boston Town. YANKEE castoffs are getting their revenge. It's quite a drop from the top to the bottom of the American League and no one can have it wished on him without feeling a bit spiteful.

The Red Sox, erstwhile Yankees, are taking their spite out on the Huguenots and the browns of the champions are wet with nervous perspiration.

The New Yorkers hit the City of Books and Beans needing only one victory to clinch the 1922 flag. They still need that one triumph.

Tip Collins, turned adrift from the luxuries of champions, snapped at the hand that fed him for more than a season and he checked it with a win in the first game in the series.

Yesterday Jack Quinn, veteran spitballer, considered too old for the Yankees, came through with a 1-0 victory over his former teammates.

The Red Sox met the league leaders again today, and Boston, fired by the two succeeding triumphs, will fight with new-found spirit to keep the hands of the Yankees off the 1922 flag.

Father Knickerbocker is worried and he should be. Thirteen times in twenty-one games have his boys bowed to the City of Classics this season.

The Huguenots have two more games, one with Boston and one with Washington, both on foreign territory. The Browns also have two remaining bouts and both will be fought against Chicago in St. Louis.

WONDER if the St. Louis fans who quit the Browns cold after the Yankee series have returned to cheer the athletes they lusted?

Sportsmanship of Eastcott Players. THE Eastcott poloists earn their honors. Empty fame has no appeal to the Anglo-Americans.

Last Saturday they were slated to meet Meadow Brook in the final of the tournament at the Philadelphia Country Club.

The untimely death of C. C. Ramsey in an automobile accident caused Meadow Brook to default and the cup was awarded to Eastcott through the "walkover."

But it was refused. The Anglo-Americans wanted nothing that was not won on the field against able-bodied opposition.

They offered Meadow Brook a sporting proposition. The Bala Cup would go to the winner of the Monty Waterbury Memorial trophy match to be contested at Westcott. The proposal was accepted.

And the other day at Westbury Eastcott trimmed Meadow Brook by a margin of one goal from the flat. The handiwork of three goals was not needed. Eastcott won, 11-10.

NOT so many years ago if Central High was beaten in a football game it would be one of the biggest upsets of the scholastic season.

Yesterday the Crimson and Gold was walked by Penn Charter and the defeat was taken as a matter of course.

WILLS SCORES VICTORY, BUT ADDS LITTLE GLORY

Stops "South American" in Twelfth Round in New York. New York, Sept. 29.—Harry Wills, the heavy-chested steeplechase rider from Orleans, won a fight last night, but in the opinion of boxing fans he did little to add to the reputation he is trying to build up for his proposed bout with Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight boxing championship next year.

Wills, who is a native of New York, defeated the "South American" in the twelfth round of a ten-round fight at the Madison Square Garden.

TRIP TO WIMBLEDON NEWS TO JOHNSTON

Knows Nothing of 1924 European Invasion With Tilden. San Francisco, Sept. 29.—William Tilden, the tennis star, has been asked to go to Wimbledon, England, for a trip to Wimbledon, England, in 1924, with William T. Tilden, 2d, the American champion, to invade European courts.

After two months of tennis—since early August—Johnston said he would like to see his opponent next spring, but he would be able to bring the national championship West next year. He will devote himself to commercial pursuits for six months, "Little Bill" added.

Apparently the strain of recent fast playing, including the Davis Cup tournament, has left Johnston in good condition, although he lost eight points in the East.
