

ENGLISH DEBATERS MEET SWARTHMORE

Oxford Men Will Be on Both Sides of League of Nations Argument Tonight

SHOULD AMERICA ENTER?

Men from Oxford University, England, will both advocate and oppose America's entrance into the League of Nations in a debate...

The debate will be novel in that both the affirmative and negative teams will be composed of students representing both institutions...

The purpose of the debate is to attempt to reach a settlement of the question rather than record a victory...

Uncommon Sense

BY JOHN BLAKE

THE difference between what one earns and what one spends is profit. "Velvet" is a term applied to profit which is a little greater than one naturally expects from a business or an investment.

There are various kinds of "velvet" to be derived from the business of life. Not all of these kinds are in money, or in bonds, or in real property.

MANY a man of vast fortune would exchange all his minted "velvet" for the "velvet" that his neighbor enjoys in the way of a sound digestion and plenty of sleep.

Many an old man who has traveled a lonely road discovers at sixty that his "velvet" is worth but little compared to that of his neighbor, who has a family of well-brought-up children.

To hundreds of hard-headed business men, the ability of their acquaintances to enjoy music and understand pictures and find pleasure in nature is worth more than all their accumulations and all the properties they have got together.

On the other hand, there are men who have built great industries, to whom the fact that they are employing thousands of men and adding to the production of merchandise is the real "velvet" which they have sought and won.

THIS is a world composed of many people with many different ideas and ideals.

Stefanson, the explorer, got out of a trip through the polar regions—that other men would have regarded as a terrible hardship—the greatest joy of his existence.

There are elderly and portly bankers who would consider it the most enjoyable form of "velvet" to play

MONEY is far from being an adequate measure of "velvet." It is rich pay for some men, poor pay for others.

The safe rule is to consider what is worth most to us in the days after accumulation has been made and work for that as our chief object.

Then we shall finish life "on velvet," which, in other words, means in the possession of something as near to happiness as any human being can hope to attain.
