

PARENTAL BLESSING FOR YOUNG ELOPERS

Two Couples Defy Conventions and Seek Paradise by Way of Gretna Greens

RELATIVES OUTSPEEDED

Two couples who eloped to Maryland towns, closely pursued by irate fathers and mothers, have returned to their homes to be forgiven and have received the parental blessing.

Miss Helen Johnson Collins, nineteen-year-old daughter of Dr. W. A. Alton, of Swarthmore College, who eloped with Charles Frederick Spinkler, a Wharton School student, found her parents in a forgiving mood.

Just as Miss Collins and Mr. Spinkler made a hurried trip to Maryland, with Swarthmore College authorities, writing to various Maryland Green towns, not to issue a license to the couple, George Jackson, of 1575 North street, and Miss Elinor V. Roberts, of 504 North Thirty-third street, attracted the latter's parents to Elton.

Mr. Jackson, who is twenty-two, and Miss Roberts, seventeen, met at Elton, where the girl was sitting with her parents at their breakfast. They had known each other only two days.

Mr. Jackson confided his plans to elope to William Holloway, of 1812 Columbia avenue, a friend. The news somehow reached the parents of Miss Roberts, and they took a train to Broad street station, where they arrived at the home of the Rev. G. P. Ableson, pastor of the Elton Methodist Episcopal church, just a few minutes after he had made their daughter and young Jackson man and wife.

The parents of the bride took the matter with the best grace possible and the entire party returned to the city to attend another wedding, which, however, had been well planned and of which all parties interested had been fully notified.

It was the wedding of Jackson's sister, Miss Edith Jackson, twenty-two years old, to Edward Robinson, twenty-four, of 2112 South street, which was performed in the Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul, and Jackson changed from being groom for the moment to best man for his sister's husband.

After the ceremony there was a double wedding reception at the Jackson home.

WOMEN SERIOUSLY INJURED BY CARS

Two in Critical Condition—One Victim Jammed Beneath One-Man Vehicle

Two women were seriously hurt last night when struck by trolley cars, and four other persons were injured in street accidents.

Struck by a trolley car at Frankford avenue and Conly street, an unidentified woman about seventy-five years old received a fracture of the skull. She was taken to Frankford Hospital, where she is being held for her recovery.

Charles Turin, 2314 East Clearfield street, motorist of a car, told the police he did not see the woman until after she was struck.

A one-man trolley car struck and injured Miss Mary Schwenk, thirty-two years old, of Thirtieth street and Green, at Ridge avenue and Jefferson street.

Miss Schwenk was rolled under and it was necessary to jack up the car before she could be released. She was taken to the Women's Hospital suffering from internal injuries. Her condition was said to be critical.

Struck by an automobile on Academy road and Grant avenue, Stella, Elizabeth, fifty-four years old, of 2104 Franklin street, was injured at the Frankford Hospital.

A milk wagon driven by Charles Bustin, of 2945 Spruce street, ran over Edwin Muller, two years old, of 2314 Turner street, at Twenty-fifth and Turner streets. The child is in the Mary Drexel Home with a broken thigh and cuts and bruises.

When he was struck by an automobile at Twenty-third and Nassau streets Buster Henry, four years old, of 2311 Nassau street, suffered a fractured leg. He was taken to the Women's College Hospital. The car was driven by Adam Borsini, of Twenty-third and Page streets.

Warren Bronte, sixteen-year-old, of 2127 West Columbia avenue, was struck by a trolley car last night as he was crossing Broad, near the Columbia street crossing. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his condition is reported to be serious. Bronte is suffering from severe lacerations and contusions.

Edwin Noodles, of 1317 North Twenty-seventh street, was striking the taxi cab.

600 SCHOOL CHILDREN LISTEN TO STORIES ABOUT INDIANS

Wird Tale of Pueblo Snake Dance Is Narrated Convincingly by Miss Helen Fernald at University Museum

By lantern slides, by moving pictures and by vocal from the mouth of Miss Helen Fernald the manners and idiosyncrasies of the kindred of that old and unfortunate friend, Lo, were portrayed to some 600 public and parochial school children gathered in the University Museum yesterday afternoon.

The figure of Lo himself appeared twice or three times in the course of the lecture, which was the opening of a weekly series on this subject and that a letter from Lo when a picture was shown of Lo on the brink of taking a sweet bath, which Miss Fernald said he was inclined to follow with a cold plunge. Another showed Lo as a little boy, being by his blind father to the top of a tree.

Mainly, however, the lecture concerned the members of the family, including the Pueblo confraternity of the snake dance. The snake dance, it seems, is a sort of combination of the north-western customs of the Apache and the World Series and has a certain resemblance to a national Democratic convention. Last year the priests of this cult, Miss Fernald explained, still off all or nearly all of their clothes and with leathern bags under their arms go hunting in desert and gorges for snakes—puffles snakes, preferably. Somehow enough snakes are always to be found, and when they have been the priests take them to a holy rock and live with them there for seven days.

The snakes of course do not bite the priests because the priests put them into a trance condition by singing pueblo songs and holding magic wands in their hands and by striking their heads with feathers. At certain times a snatched meal is split around the place which the snakes may eat if they want to.

At last the great day dawns. The priests come up out of the rock and the snakes with whom they are by this time on a decidedly chilly basis come after them. The dance begins with the priestess padding all around a kind of patio after the snakes. When it is half way over some more of the snatched grain is split out for the snakes who are then free to return to their holes, sadder but wiser reptiles, and all boys are declared off.

Just as Miss Collins and Mr. Spinkler made a hurried trip to Maryland, with Swarthmore College authorities, writing to various Maryland Green towns, not to issue a license to the couple, George Jackson, of 1575 North street, and Miss Elinor V. Roberts, of 504 North Thirty-third street, attracted the latter's parents to Elton.
