

WOMEN IN DRIVE TO ROUSE VOTERS

Plan to Register More Than 200,000 Dilatory Citizens
by Tomorrow Night

HOUSE-TO-HOUSE CANVASS

Register Tomorrow!

Tomorrow will be the last registration day. Voters who have not registered upon the two preceding registration days will not be qualified to cast a ballot at the November election unless they appear at their regular polling places tomorrow and register.

The polls will be open from 7 A. M. to 1 P. M., and from 4 to 10 P. M.

Women's political and civic organizations are working hard today to arouse voters so that 200,000 unregistered voters will be qualified tomorrow for the November election.

Women prominent in the social and civic life of Philadelphia have volunteered to distribute cards throughout the city, starting at 5 P. M.

"Register this Saturday—your last chance—before 1 P. M. You and your friends, if you can't vote unless you register. It's your moral duty and your civic duty to register."

Some of the "minute women" in motored cars have obtained lists of unregistered voters and will make a house-to-house canvass. Other women, stationed at street corners, at store and theatre entrances and at railroad stations, will urge men and women voters to enroll.

Where Leaders Will Be Stationed

The volunteer distributors and the places assigned to them are as follows: Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, president, Joint Registration Committee, Broad and Walnut streets.

MRS. SEIBERLING RESENTS SLUR ON WILSON AT MEETING

Leaves Political Gathering
While Ex-Judge Patterson Is Discussing Former President's War Policies

"Fine Specimen to Talk That Way of a Dying Man," She Declares, in Explaining Action

MRS. J. D. SEIBERLING

Resenting an attack on former President Wilson by Judge John M. Patterson at a women's Pinchot meeting in the home of Mrs. Joseph M. Gazzam, 203 South Nineteenth street, last night, Mrs. J. Dallas Seiberling, of 339 South Eighteenth street, arose and left the meeting in disgust.

Explaining the incident, Mrs. Seiberling said today she is a staunch Republican, but has too much respect for Woodrow Wilson to listen while slurs are being cast upon him.

"Judge Patterson disgusted me," Mrs. Seiberling said. "I simply got up and walked out when he began referring to the Democratic war, and calling Mr. Wilson an 'egotist' who wanted to rule like a super-President."

"Some people forget that there are a few others on earth besides Republicans," Judge Patterson is a fine specimen to stand up and talk that way about a dying man who gave his life in the service of his country. I wonder who Judge Patterson thinks he is."

Mrs. Seiberling is engaged actively in politics, and is working earnestly to get women to register tomorrow so they may vote for Mr. Pinchot.

Today she will have as her guest Miss Marion Woodrow Wilson, a cousin of the former President.

Mrs. Gazzam discounted the incident as "insignificant" when asked about it today.

"Some one did leave the meeting," she said.

PEPPERMAN CALLED PEDDLER OF DRUGS

Milk Wagon Driver Testifies Slain Salesman Tried to Borrow From Him

CASE UP TO JURY TODAY

John Pepperman, New York baker's supplies salesman, who was shot and killed by Mrs. Clara Woodward, March 23 last, at her rooming house, 311 North Ninth street, was a peddler as well as a user of drugs, according to testimony given today at Mrs. Woodward's trial.

The defendant is being tried for first degree murder before Judge Barratt in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, room 453 City Hall. The case probably will go to the jury late this afternoon or tonight, as the defense closed at noon.

Mrs. Woodward's spent twenty minutes on the witness stand in her own behalf today. She was pale but composed, and bore up better than previously.

Under cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Kelley she declared Pepperman on the day he was killed had wanted her to give him $500 to buy drugs "from a man at the wharf." Pepperman, she said, had a long-bladed knife, with a spring-back handle, and showed it to her, threatening to kill her.

The woman denied that she had tried all the day, which ended in the murder, to prevent Pepper from going to New York. The Assistant District Attorney showed her a derby hat Pepperman had worn, and asked did she recognize it. She identified it as his, and said she did not remember having run upstairs with it, as other witnesses related. Then she broke down, weeping freely. She said between sobs that she did not remember getting the revolver.

Eugene Horner, 670 North Twelfth street, a milk wagon driver, testified her had known Pepperman and Mrs. Woodward and knew that Pepperman was a drug seller.

"Once he tried to borrow $75 from me to buy drugs from a ship docked at Port Richmond. I advised him to let it alone. He said 'Yes, but there's big profit in it.'"

The witness said he had been to the Ninth street house that day of the murder; that all had been drinking, and that Pepperman had left the house.

MOTHER COLLAPSES AT SON'S SENTENCE

Rushes From Court When "Joe
the Boob" Gets Eight Years for Drug Selling

LENIENCY PLEA IGNORED

Mrs. Mary Santore, mother of Joseph Santore, alias "Joe the Boob," uttered a piercing scream in court today when Judge McDevitt sentenced her son to eight years in the county prison on a charge of selling drugs.

The woman ran from the courtroom, staggered into the corridor and collapsed. She was revived by court attendants.

Mrs. Santore pleaded with the Court for leniency for her son, but she could offer little evidence to back up the plea.

Daniel J. Shern, counsel for Santore, said he was easily led by others, which gained him the name of "Joe the Boob." Shern reminded the Court that Santore surrendered of his own volition and made no attempt to place technicalities in the way of the conviction.

Cousin of Joe Bollona
Mr. Shern said that Santore was a cousin of Joe Bollona, now serving a sentence for drug-selling in Moyamensing Prison. He gave a letter to Judge McDevitt from Bollona in which the latter said Santore was not to blame for selling drugs, engaging in the traffic at the behest of others. Bollona also said in the letter that he was to blame for the plight of Santore.

In reviewing the record of Santore Assistant District Attorney Gordon said that the prisoner frequently had been in contact with the police.

He said that Santore twice was arrested for attacking his wife and during the last assault shot her twice. He said he was easily led by others, which gained him the name of "Joe the Boob."

Last March Santore was implicated in the murder of a Negro at Eleventh and Poplar streets and previous to that he was arrested for breaking into a store.

INDUSTRIAL PLANTS FORCED TO CLOSE BY THE DROUGHT

Health Officials Issue Warning

The drought, now in its twenty-fourth day in this section of the country, has reached the stage where industries are forced to shut down for want of water power, with the State Health Department issuing an official warning against drinking from polluted and stagnant wells and streams.

The Orangeville Agricultural Works, near Bloomsburg, shut down yesterday for lack of water and Orangeville has been without electric light for two nights. The plant operates by water power. Its closing down has thrown fifty men out of employment and the Jamison City Tannery will close tomorrow unless rain falls, making fifty more men idle.

Two more coal washeries in Schuylkill County closed yesterday for lack of water, according to a report from Pottsville. No rain has fallen in Schuylkill County for more than four weeks and unless the drought ends soon coal mining will be seriously affected.

Anthracite operators report that the warm, dry weather has caused an exceedingly "slow market" for hard coal.

Council Acts When Told New York

Council Acts When Told New York

Council yesterday voted $25,000 in prizes to the competing fancy dress and comic clubs for next New Year's parade. Leaders of the mummers expressed themselves as gratified by the appropriation, which is the largest ever voted.

H. Bart McHugh, the marshal of the New Year's show, appeared before the committee to urge an appropriation larger than the $15,000 voted last year. He said that recently a prominent New Yorker had approached several of the club captains and had suggested that they parade in New York, promising handsome prizes if they would make the journey.

Mr. McHugh suggested that an appropriation of $20,000 be voted. Councilman Pomeroy raised the amount to $25,000.
