 $D_{\rm But}^{\rm ON}$ T think we are advocating violence on the part of a diamond director. But some of as perhaps remember that when we thought we knew more than dad and to do the or refresh to obey his commands, we involuntarily bent up our balls face downward over the parental knee and a paddle was plied where it hust like sin.

Now baseball players-in fact all athletes who play strenuous games that require the aussies of youth-are boys at heart and in their actions. They must follow the instructions and commands of their manager, or they must be punished in order that they will properly respect their boss. "Spare the rod and spoil the shild." you know.

Had Huggins employed the right methods in managing his athletes he would deserve and receive the sympathy of the baseball public. He won two pennants and, largely because one of his laborers was Babe Ruth, Monarch of Maulers, large piles of currency were deposited in New York banks to the credit of the colonels.

But the Yanks lost two world's championship fights because their plays ing, and more especially their thinking, bordered on a state of chaos. There-fore, even has true friends believe that Miller James should welcome the opportunity to transfer his baseball talents to other fields

It is a known fact that several years ago the Yank owners were anxious to purchase a uniform for a rotund person who would require twice as much cloth to cover his unkedness as did the wee Huggins-none other than Wilbert Robinson, at present the pilot of the Brooklyn team.

It is likely that the colonels feel the same way about it now. It is not unlikely that they can diad a way to transport Uncle Wilbert across the Brooklyn Budge, from the National to the American League. . . .

How Does It Strike You?

Huggins' Strategy Bu Outlook at Penn THE OBSERVER Golfing Gameness

NEW YORK is discussing today the probable successor to Miller Huggins. The mite manager will be given a vacation during the last year of his contract, according to the dope emanating from Broadway. Huggins was outgeneraled by McGraw during the World Series. All his strategy failed and he was burned at the stake by the second guessers. After the play is all over, it's the easiest thing in the world to point our the move that should have been made. Huggins was unfortunate in guessing

The strategical move which brought great condemnation on the wee manager was the intentional passing of Young in the eighth inning of Sunday . game.

Kelly, who was a dismal figure in the other games this year as well as last season, broke up the ball game and the series with his single in this crisis

Seven times out of ten or better than that, Huggins' guess would have been the right one. Young is a dangerous hitter and a left-handed batter Kelly had failed to show offensive strength and, furthermore, bats from the starboard of the disk.

If Kelly had hit into a double play Huggins would have been a hero. But he singled and the wrath of the baseball world tumbled down on the Yankees' general.

They ride Huggins in New York. The players, the writers and the public are continually on his neck, and yet for two seasons he won pennants with a bunch of high-tempered, pampered and spoiled ball players. . . .

HUGGINS isn't the greatest manager in baseball by several running leaps, but he is far from the mental wreck his ball players would have us believe.

The Grit of Gene Sarazen

THE victory of little Gene Sarazen in the national open golf championship at the Skokie Country Club last summer came as a stunning surprise to those golfers who were not "in the know."

Gene had played sensational golf through the South during the preceding winter, but his real capabilities were known to only a comparatively few of the professionals.

They said he was a cocky youngster, quiet enough, to be sure, but filled to the very brim with confidence in himself. As a natural enough adjunct of that confidence he was as game a player as ever appeared in the arena of ompetitive sport.

Golf. of course, is not a sport that usually calls for physical courage. That much even the adherents of the game admitted. By gameness they mean that ability to give the very utmost in a man's soul when the crucial moment of a match arrived. Sarazen had that ability, they admitted.

Now little Gene has proved that he possesses the grit to play at a chamionship gait when handicapped by illness and suffering pain. In his seventytwo-hole match with Walter Hagen for the championship of the world (a match that, incidentally, Sarazen won after being 2 down with half of the battle finished) Gene was suffering with appendicitis. He didn't make that an alibi for delaying his match with one of the greatest masters of golf the United States has ever produced. He went out on the links in spite of the handicap and played fine enough golf to win, That bespeaks physical courage as well as ability and cockiness.

GENE SARAZEN was taken to the hospital the very night of his victory. He said nothing of his suffering while the match was on. In all probability he would never have advanced it as an excuse if Hagen had beaten him. That is the sort of stuff that our champion of the links is made of.

The Outlook at Penn

THE University of Pennsylvania football team has survived its first two I games and has made a very creditable showing. Undergraduates are so enthused they are boosting their team as the best in the world. 'Twas ever

The Quakers were disappointing in the Franklin and Marshall game, bu they displayed a decided improvement against the University of the South. While this is a creditable showing for early season games, there is nothing about it to cause such a loud blowing of the horn.

The Pennsylvania team undoubtedly is improved over last season. The material is better and, what is more, the spirit is better. The candidates are getting a firm grasp on the fundamentals of the game.

Next Saturday Heisman's athletes face Maryland in another intersectional game and once again the Quakers should have it easy. Maryland was held

Thus the adequate records to work on? Thus the committee may select ten or fifty, but at least they are sure to submit a list of all those who have played enough to warrant recognition. I consider ranking a great stimulus to the game, particularly for juniors and bays. The targest entry in any breed is in the shepherds in which seventy-six will be benched. The shepherds will be judged by H. C. Abrenstedt, of White Plains, who also will award the honors among hadger dogs. The other judges will be: Dr. J. "Nay, Nay!" Says Stallings

SPEAKING of managers, a rumor was going the rounds in New York to the effect that George Stallings might come over to Philadelphia and show our Phillies how to climb the pennant hidder. We approached the cristwhile. Miracle Man of the Boston Braves and asked whether we might assist him in docating a garage for his motor in our liste town.

"Me leave Encluster, where I am making more money than the majority of the mejor lengue chibiowners"" he shouted. "Well, at that I have my price but I know and you know that the Philadelphia Club's highest offer, even if they wanted me, would be ten folloop Gernian marks below what I would ask.

And then George began to tell is what an exceptionally bright and craft baseball leader way Fred Merke. Wonder if this meant anything? Fred would like to prove that he has his logicague managerial brains in his done. and it appears that George would like to help Fred prove it. But then there is William F. Baker who may not desire proof from Merkie. It is the general opinion that the owners of the Yankees and Giants will actually lose money when they have paid all the expenses of staging the 1922 World Series. If this is true, the Yank colonels and the Stonehan. McQuaide-Metiraw trip are likely to express regret over the hasty notion prompted by Judge Londis, which gave the fund for disabled soldiers the more than $120,000 paid on by the fans who attended the second game.

TT IS a wondertal then that the men who taught for democracy I screenal years ago, and who returned incapacitated for their acsustemed a tistics, are to a survive such a large sum of money to aid in making their coming yours of life more easy and enjoyable.
