Take Sarazen's Place in Exhibition Here

WHEN Gene Sarazen was taken to the hospital with an acute attack of appendicitis, following his world's championship match with Walter Hagen, local goldom was set back quite a pace. Sarazen had won in spite of his handicap, and the well-known welkin was ringing with applause for him. Golfers in Philadelphia had come to know and like the sturdy, blackhaired little youngster, and they cheered vociferously his splendid victory. Their regret at his illness was just as keen as their enthusiasm for his wonderful play.

The property of Maryland's hopes of giving Penn a real battle in the gridiron tussle at Franklin Field Saturday rose today when it was made definite that Ed Pugh, star halfback of the team, would be able to start the same.

Pugh has not played in a game this season, suffering a severely bruised shoulder in practice nearly three weeks ago.

Pugh's return will add much versatility to Maryland's offensive. He is the best running back who has been on the squad in recent years, being equally as good a plunger, off-tackle shooter or sprinter around the ends. He
