Bucknell Used Pass Instead of Kick

Over-Anxiety and Not Deliberate Violation of Football

By STONEY MCLINN

THAT try-for-point-after-touchdown rule developed two situations in important games last Saturday-situations which will cause many a football coach to add heavily to the number of electric light amperes for which he or the athletic authorities pay at the end of the month. In Harrisburg, the capital of our great Commonwealth, where the Tech team of that city met the Pennsylvania Junior Varsity, offside play by the Technical boys when the 15d and Blue seconds were attempting to drop-kick after touchdown lost the game. The final score was 13 to 12 That one point, due to wer-anxiety, was made the really big factor in the mttle.

In Lewisburg, where Bucknell defeated Susquehanna by a 51-0 total, the winners had no difficulty in coring touchdowns, but the damp boots of their klekers could not beate the spot which meant the additional cones," Consequently Bucknell, which eleven was having good success with the forward pass, decided to imploy the nur route, and the result was three points in four trials.

PROBABLY the Penn Juniors deserved to win that some In any creat. Harrisburg know the rules and, in the judgment of the officials, TONEY MeLINN did not respect them. The fast remains, however, that it was an unsatisfactory ending to schat reports indicate was a tight fight. The Red and Blue kicker made a dismal failure of the tra-for-point. If one of the big games is last in a similar wate - well, the Roles Conmittee will use up millions of unspeces before the 1923 gendiron season arrives.

Bucknell Did What Was Expected

BUCKNELL did precisely what it was expected teams would do when they were leading by a wide margin. When the opponents are so weak that they can't stop forward passes in middlold and in scoring territory, there is every reason why the winners should cover up kicking inefficiency by resorting to aerial staff for the point after touchdown,

But this does not help the new rule. For had Bucknell been more nearly natched by Susquehanna in strength and skill the Lewisburghans would not have had an opportunity to forward pass for points after their toe efforts had failed. Indeed, only by the use of a trick or deceptive staff of some fort will any team add a point by a pass or run when opposed to an eleven which has buttled them on anything like an equal footing, $T^{\textit{HEREFORE}}_{\textit{the drop or place kick remains the right play for the mast time to the right play for the mast time to the right play for the time to the$ the sourt team. Couch Roper, at Princeton, had no less then ten players learning have to insuct the leather with their toes list week. Other conches are equally as intent upon attaining proficiency among the kicking corps.

Freshman Hero in Lafayette Victory

IN FOOTBALL comment written more than a week ago we had the temecity to dispense some advice to football players. It was suggested that the roung man who desired to earn undying fame on the gridiron should become proficient at picking up-not falling upon- a losse ball.

In that great Lafayette-Pitt battle a freehman with the gode auld noine of Prendergast became the hero because he clusted a fumbled oral, slippery though it was, and raced a goodly distance for the only touchdown of the game. This feat deserves special mention because the young Irishman was freshie, and first-year collegious do not usually take the long chances in mportant games which greater experience permits their elders-the sophs, uniors and seniors-to essay.

Reports from the Lafayette dressing room have it that before the game Jock Satherland charged his men to "follow the bail." We do not know what brand of football Satherland teaches, but we suspect he intended that they should adopt the sufe method, hest suffed to a wet surf, of failing on the ball when the fumble occurred in the midst of struggling combatants,

BE ALL this as it may, a freshman had the audacity to entirely D disregard custom and pick up the loose ball. Receiver Prends cast user his headyear to cover brains which function capally, and because he was passessed of the courage to take a chance, he is happy under a shawer of hero wreaths.

How Does It Strike You?

McGraw's Age Harlow's Personality Brother vs. Brother

JOHN J. McGRAW admits he is getting old. The stamp of the years is seen in the puffs under his eyes, in his gray hair and in his inreased waist measurement.

THE OBSERVER

But these outward appearances have not convinced the Giants' general that his prime has passed. The evidence has come from his inner self.

The Little Napoleon scored a greater personal success this year than ever before. He sat on the bench and moved his athletes like jumping-jacks, and through his maneuvering they won the highest honors in baseball.

McGraw has a right to be proud of his achievement. He is hailed as the hero of the World Series. But despite all this, the thrill is missing.

"Enthusiasm belongs to youth," said John Joseph, "and I'm afraid I'm no longer young. My enthusiasm is not so keen as it used to be in spite of myself Even the winning of the series by the Giants failed to arouse me to a high pitch of excitement. I'm getting old."

Enthusiasm does belong to youth, and this vindicates the proverb that a man is as old as he feels.

The year is a poor yardstick with which to measure age. The man of fifty is very often as young as men ten and fifteen years his junior.

Enthusiasm is a better standard of measurement and many a dull old, timer has perked up since he discovered that he could still drive a golf ball more than a 100 yards.

EE KING isn't the most unlucky ball player in the world. The Li West Virginian was tagged and shipped for the minors from the Phillies, and he returned to the big league to get a share of the Giants' World Series coin. . . .

State Athletes at Colgate

WHEN Dick Harlow left Penn State to coach Colgate eleven, five of Bezdek's athletes followed the popular tutor to the Hamilton institution. On Saturday Colgate lines up against Bill Roper's Tigers, but none of the State players will be in Harlow's battle array. Of their own volition, the quintet of former State players have given up their candidacy for the 1922 eleven. An eligibility rule at Colgate bars, for a period of one year, any athlete who has been awarded a letter at any other college. This is the nearest thing a one-year resident rule at Hamilton.

Only one of the five Center County collegians earned his letter at State. The other four are eligible, but in order to relieve Colgate of the delicate sitnation which their transfer created, they have decided to declare themselves ineligible for one season.

Yet they have not dropped football. They are helping Harlow by playing on the scrubs, thus aiding in the development of the varsity.

There must be a great deal of magnetism to the personality of Richard Harlow when five athletes are willing to give up a year of football in order eventually to play under his direction again.

 C^{oLAGTE} , Lafayette and Lehigh are three institutions without the one-year rule. It is likely that the freshman law will be installed before the start of the 1923 football season at all three institutions. Discussion of it is going on now. C. (C. 1990)

About this city there are several families in the conching business. The McNichols, the Millers and the Cornors are the most notable,

A Utah family holds what should be a record if it isn't. Four brothers, Milton, Otto, Lowell and Wilford Romney, all coach different football teams, and they were all successful in their opening games.

HEINE MILLER is looking for odd jobs to take on in his spare minutes. All he is doing new is coaching Frankford, St. Joseph's and Racine. He finds time hanging heavily on his hands.

FRIENDLY critic asks why the baseball writers continue to remove the A FRIENDLY critic asks why the base of Miller James Huggins. The f. c. gives volce to this :

"Hug has yon two pennants, the first two which have been hung on the New York Americans' pole. He must be a wise boder, a man learned in the tactics of the diamond, or he would not have had the opportunity to end his Yanks into two World Series." All this is granted, friends, We respect Huggins' baseball wisdom.

We did not criticize him in the first game when the Yanks needed a run to win, had a main on first with some out and attempted the hit-and-run play. which resulted in double put-outs. We refrained from giving it as an afterthe-battle opinion that the final game might have ended differently had Bush been permitted to fitch to Young in that inning when Kelly, who followed the player who was walked, hit the decisive blow of the series,

No. INDEED, for the diamond factionan used what he believed was good judement may have been just that and had his methods met with surveys he would have been praised for his generalship.

One of Three Musts for Mite Manager

HERE'S the truth of the matter: A baseball writer is expected to pleture for his renders the exact facts as they relate to a manager and his team. In the opinion of baseball men who are in a position to know Hug-gins must go elsewhere, must employ an aide who will teach the expensive stars to respect authority, or must get himself a new set of diamond workers, It is one of the three musts for Huggins, and the duty of an honest purveyor of baseball comment to write what he finds to be the truth about a tenm which won the American Lengue pennant and then displayed a lack of wit which would have shamed the Fourth Street Grammar School of Cofferville, Kan.

Although we are included to the opinion that the Yanks would be more successful if they opened a selling department in the iviery market-they new have the leading purchasing department. The Colonels are about to dedicate a ball park that will sear $0,000 fauntics, and they need playing color in that yard in order that they may pay for the concrete and steel. Babe Ruth, Bob Meusel, Carl Mays and other colorful athletes who were rated at a king's ransom when they were purchased may attract the cash customers who will make it possible for the Colonels to pay their building blils when they come due.

M^{ILLER} H^I GGINS descrives sympathy. But he was the manager when his company of million-dollar baseballers was formed, and added to by the greatest check-writing operations known to the national game. If he cannot control the men of temperament who noise scear "N.Y." on their chests, is it certain that he could manage a new company of athletes who, to win, would of necessity exhibit proteess on a par with that of the present Yanks?

Frank Butler With Us

FRANK BUTLER is in rown! Unless you own and enjoy using a shotgun or rifle the name may not find lodgment in your mind's eve. But if, a number of years ago, you developed a thrill when Buffalo Bill came to town, that thrill, in a large measure, was due to Mrs. Frank Butler-yes, Annie Oakley, the expert woman marksman, who has appeared before all the crowned heads of Europe, etc.

Our comings and goings have taught us that no man with good breeding. not to mention good judgment, trends on the dangerous ground of age where woman is concerned. But in this instance Frank rather seemed to want to take his wife back into the dim and distant past-Miss Cakley is his wife and upon him must rest the responsibility.

'Last week, at a New England fair''-the quotes indicate that Frank, be willing husband, is talking-"Annie Oakley worked five minutes a day for five days and received $750, which, according to my calculation, is $50 minute, or $250 for five minutes. And this same Annie Oakley, who has in shooting for forty years, won the international live-bird title in 1801. or thirty-one years ago. . . .

"SHE defeated the field in France, killing 96 out of 100, and later, at Merchantville, N. J., killed 48 out of 50 to win over Graham. at that time the champion of England. This made her the international champion." . . .

Still Retains Her Eye

our what Frank Butler wanted to impress upon us-and we thought it worthy of relating here-is that a woman who was a champion shot -one years ago, and who has been shooting to entertain the public for years than cover half the span of the average person, retains her eye, -ordination of mind and muscle and her youthful charm and vigor to suce where she is able to earn a movie queen's wage by exhibiting such skill with deadly frearns before the public.
