SEES TURKS' POWER REVIVED IN EUROPE

Mark Sullivan Tells Forum He Thinks U. S. Should Intervene in Near East

VISIONS PERIL TO FRANCE

The Turk is back in Europe to stay, in the opinion of Mark Sullivan, journalist. Mr. Sullivan appeared before the Philadelphia Forum in the Academy of Music last evening, speaking on "What's Going On in the World."

In response to a question at the conclusion of his formal address, the famous journalist said he believes there should be intervention of some sort by the United States in the Near East, but that the Administration has shown no intention of taking a hand in the affair.

There is little likelihood of the Turks being kept permanently out of Europe," Mr. Sullivan said. "The Turks look to Constantinople just as all Roman Catholics look toward St. Peter's in Rome. I think they will probably gain a foothold again, but the matter is in great Britain's hands."

Low Birth Rate Real Danger. The declining French birth rate was the subject of a large part of Mr. Sullivan's lecture. The methods taken by France to fortify her position by extensive colonization through Asia and Africa, Mr. Sullivan feared, might eventually lead to non-white dominance over the white races of the world.

"In thirty-five years Europe will be at her weakest point in military strength," he said. "Then the diminished birth rate through the war just passed will be felt the worst. If any Eastern Rismark should conclude that was the time to strike at Europe he would find the Continent least able in man power to resist his onslaught."

France is the thorn in the flesh of the European situation, according to Mr. Sullivan. "In the central fabric of the world situation is woven the fear of France for her own perpetuity and a distrust of the nations about her."

If France and the allied white nations can maintain a degree of unity among themselves there will be no question of the continuance of the white supremacy among the peoples of the earth," Mr. Sullivan continued. "The danger facing the world today is the possibility that disunity and disruption may arise among the whites and give the non-white races the opportunity to encroach upon Europe."

At the close of his hour's address Mr. Sullivan offered to answer questions bearing upon the situation he had discussed. Among the questions passed to the platform was one addressed directed to Mr. W. H. Cole, who had introduced Mr. Sullivan to the meeting.

The question was addressed to Mr. Cole in his capacity as vice president of the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition Association rather than as vice chairman of the Forum. It read: "Do you think that the people of Philadelphia should vote on the question as to whether or not there should be a Sesqui-Centennial Exposition?"

"I think the people of Philadelphia or of any city should vote on any question as to which there exists any doubt. But there is no doubt that there will be a Sesqui-Centennial in Philadelphia."

KNIGHTS HONOR McSORLEY

Retiring Official of Philadelphia Council, K. of C., Gets Testimonial. Richard T. McSorley, retiring knight of Philadelphia Council, Knights of Columbus, was presented with a testimonial last night at the annual meeting of the council in the headquarters, 1324 North Broad street.

Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty made the presentation. In responding Mr. McSorley made a plea for higher education, saying that "the advancement of a nation, race or a creed is in direct proportion to the willingness of its members to train their minds."

The Rev. Matthew L. Fortier, S. J., director of the new St. Joseph's College Foundation, announced that a post-graduate scholarship will be given to the Knights of Columbus Council whose members give the greatest aid in the undertaking to raise $1,000,000 for the building to be erected in Overbrook.

BARS MONKEY-GLAND NEWS

Petit Parliem Holds Subject Unfit for Family Discussion. Paris, Oct. 11.—One's opinion of France and Paris may be somewhat altered when it is known that the Petit Parliem, the newspaper with the largest circulation in the world, has not published a line concerning Dr. Voronoff and his monkey glands.

Explaining the reason the editor-in-chief stated that in the first place he considered this a technical question for physicians to discuss and of no interest to his readers. Besides the Petit Parliem is in a position to be greatly annoyed if people avoid subjects and even member of a household cannot read without question. All matters bordering on such questions are definitely barred from our columns.

MINISTER SCORES SECT FLIRTATIONS

Dr. Henry Harms Urges Laymen to Stick to Their Own Denomination

ADDRESSES SOCIAL UNION

Church members who habitually attend denominational services other than their own were scored by the Rev. Dr. J. Henry Harms at the October dinner of the Lutheran Social Union in the Downtown Club last night.

Dr. Harms, who is a pastor of the Church of the Holy Communion, warned the 400 clergymen and laymen present that "church flirtations" of this nature usually end in divorce from their own sect.

With Harry Hodges, president of the Social Union, as toastmaster, Dr. Harms discussed the topic "If I Were a Layman." E. Clarence Miller, a banker, copied with an address entitled "If I Were a Clergyman."

Mr. Miller warned a clergyman "to shake the world's conception of his calling by wearing clerical garb on all occasions."

"Ministers are human, like other men, and subject to temptations," said Mr. Miller. "His clerical garb will protect him from many dangers."

Dr. Harms said that if he were a layman he would be "a live one; not a dead one."

"Some laymen sleep; they sleep in church sometimes," Dr. Harms continued. "If I were a layman I would be liberal in my judgment of the preacher. I would boast, not knock, and look up, and laugh, and love, and lift. We need more lifters and fewer leavers in the Church."

"If I were a layman I would not be a flatter, sparking around with the other denominational sisters in the land. I would think the church which I had married in my heart was the goodliest and the handsomest in the lot, and I would stay at home and help around the household of my faith. Flirtations laymen usually end up in divorce."

Little Benny's Note Book

By Lee Pape. This afternoon I smelt a grate smell coming out of the kitchen and I went back and stuck my head in and our cook Nora was peeling potatoes and the smell was still going on, he saying, O boy that was good.

Its good to taste good too, Nora said, and I said, Why, what is it? That's for me to know and you to find out, Nora said.

And she went and opened the oven door and quick shut it again before I had time to see what was in there and then she took out the potatoes and I could hardly stand it, saying, Well, is it a cake and Nora said, Possibly, and I said, Is it a pie and she said, Possibly, and I kept on standing there smelling the smell and wishing I was eating it, and she took the potatoes out and I said, Well, what is it and she said, Well, it's a cake and I said, Well, what is it and she said, Well, it's a cake and I said, Well, what is it and she said, Well, it's a cake.
