The four robbers drove to the tail loring shop in an automobile and while two stood watch outside, the other two forced the front door and entered.

When Lyons passed he looked into the window and saw the bandits at work. Just as he was turning to go for the police, the two men outside covered him with their pistols and commanded him to stand with his face against the wall and his hands up.

While he was held in that position, cloth valued at $2000 was carried from the store and loaded into the waiting automobile. The bandits then leaped into the machine and sped away. Lyons notified the police at once, but no trace of the automobile could be
