What to Say

What to Say

Dear Cynthia—I am a woman thirtynine and a widow. My husband died about two months ago and left me with two children. Two weeks ago I met a young man of twenty-six at a dance At first we merely admired each other, but now we realize we are deeply in

You must tell the young man the truth, though Cynthia cannot believe you are in earnest. How could a widow of only eight weeks want to go to dances? How could she be willing to let people think her own babies, the children of her so recently dead husband, are her nieces? It is hard to believe.

Go Back to Work

Dear Cynthia—This is my first attempt at your daily column. I would appreciate your advice very much if you could be of some assistance.

I would like to have your view of my little problem. My dad is in business for himself, and has been for the last thirty years. When I was working for him, which was one year ago, we got along all right. Now he never speaks or notices me in any way. When I left we had some disagreement as to vacation and pay. Our understanding was $1 a week, with clothes and board. That wouldn't have been so bad if he had let me dress as other young men dress, but he wouldn't. Three times a year it was a fight or se bad if he had let me dress as other young men dress, but he wouldn't. Three times a year it was a fight for me to get a new suit. And, besides, I wanted to put away for a rainy day, but he couldn't see my view. I left, and have been making out fairly well ever since. Now things are not going so well with him, and my mother wants me to go back to work for him. My position is not so good, but it leaves me a chance to study and has little signs of advancement. The business my dad is in hasn't. What shall I do?

First of all, the furniture must be bereft of all traces of the old paint or varnish with which it was originally endowed. This can be accomplished by the use of a liquid varnish remover which may be obtained at any paint store, or with the aid of fine sandpaper or steel wool. It is very escential that or steel wool. It is very essential that a smooth even surface be obtained be-

With a good surface upon which to proceed, take a large, hat brush and apply the paint in as broad, even strokes as possible until the entire surface is covered. Proceed in this manner with as many coats of flat paint as you desire to have. ture has as many as seventeen coats to give it the lovely finish for which it is so well known. Always remember to rub each coat with the fine sandpaper or steel wool until perfectly smooth before applying the next coat. When the last applying the next coat. When the last coat has been applied, rub it down with powdered pumice stone moistened with water or linseed oil to give it its final "satiny" luster. The finishing coat may be of enamel, or several coats of shellac may be applied over the final coat of paint, each being subbed down. shellar may be applied over the final coat of paint, each being rubbed down as directed. The shellar permits more advantageously of further treatment in the form of an antique finish, which is obtained by rubbing raw umber over the finished surface and wiping off as much as is desired with a cloth.
