Another Critic of Officials

Another critic of the authorities was found yesterday in Julius B. Braun, a representative of the Mills family. Braun is the head of Braun's National Detective Agency, 5 Beekman street. New York. He has been engaged to investigate the case by Florence North of New Brunswick, attorney for Char-lotte Mills, sixteen-year-old daughter of the murdered choir singer.

James Mills, husband of the murdered woman, attracted public attention to the susplcions against him by calling nt the Presecutor's office on Saturday and protesting against being freated as Thus, the statement made by Braun yesterday created a situation in which the representatives of the only two persons with a possible motive, so far as known, are attacking the authorities for their stupidity and their failure to solve the mystery and bring the murderers to justice. Braun disclosed to a reporter that has a large packet of letters which, he says prove the intimacy between the rector and Mrs. Mills. At his home at 342 East Fifteenth street yesterday "I have seen a statement in the newspapers to the effect that I had furnished Detective Totten with leads and information. I did no such thing. "These letters leave no doubt of the intimate relations between Rector Hall and Mrs. Mills," said the detective. "The authorities have not seen these letters and we do not intend to disclose their contents now. We are holding them until the proper time comes, when we will produce them.

"The letters show," he went on. "these there was a certain telephone

According to Braun's theory, the affair between the rector and the choir singer came to the attention of some-body, parkage more than one parents. body-perhaps more than one person who had more than ordinary opportu-nities to observe what was going on. This might have been a member of the congregation. It might even have been another singer in the choir, where there was a good deal of feeling against Mrs. Mills because of the attention pale her by the rector, and her growing in-fluence in church affairs. Braun said that Mills should be eliminated from all suspicion, that he was not the type of man to have done anything of the sort. According to Braun, Mills had accounted for every moment of his time of the night of Two Dead in Wreck on Lake Eric Thursday, September 14. The detective also said that statemeents recently attributed to Charlotte Mills reflecing upon her father were nonsense, and that Charlotte had been indulging some lose talk, which he intended to caution her against. Reed's $45 Values

It is human to expect a great deal, and equally human to find that one has expected too much. Therefore, when something "exceeds expecta-tion" it's worth talking about.

These suits at $45 exceed any one's reasonable expectations. Viewed from a fabric angle, the expert will acknowledge their worth. Judged for Style and Tailoring, the wellgroomed man will acclaim their excellence.

Weighed for Value, it must be admitted that no such degree of money's worth has been available for years.

With these suits Reed's plan to further impress upon men of sound judgment that there is a convincing reason for the continuous growth of this store.
