Senator Vare Dies After Sudden Relapse

News of Death Spreads Rapidly

News of the Senator's death spread fast, so fast that the family scarcely had left the telephone when the telephone calls and telegrams began to pour in.

They came from men high and low, from the Government, from Congress, from officials high in the Government...

Among the first friends to reach the house were Revolver of Doods Hazlett and C. C. Linsinger Watson.

The Senator's death was a great personal loss, said Mr. Hazlett, "Boy and man I have known him practically all of his life."

39TH WARD IN MOURNING; MANY HOMES SHOW CREPE

Hundreds of Men and Women Gather on Sidewalks to Discuss Senator Vare's Death—Nearly Every Family Knew Him

Almost the entire Thirty-ninth Ward was a "house of mourning" today as news of Senator Vare's death spread through the section.

He had entered politics in the old First Ward and continued his activities in that part of the First which became the Thirty-ninth Ward.

It would hardly be an exaggeration to say Senator Vare knew every old family in the ward.

Crepe Draped in Windows The Thirty-ninth is at the extreme southern part of the city, and is bounded roughly by Broad street, Mifflin street and the Delaware River.

Hundreds of men and women assembled on sidewalks and at doorsteps in the ward this morning and talked over the Senator's death and what it meant to the ward.

In a few instances, old political followers hastily bought crepe and placed it on their windows.

for the Ward Executive Committee. He was well liked by everybody and had plenty of energy.

Britain Insists on Three-Mile Limit

Continued from Page One The Government's contention that a three-mile limit, but within four leagues of the coast, if it can be shown she has been carrying on illegal traffic with the American shore, was upheld by Federal Judge Hazel today in a case against the British schooner Henry L. Marshall.

Evidence also was introduced to show that the Marshall left the Bahama Islands with two sets of manifests. One stated she was in ballast. The other gave her cargo as liquor and her destination as Halifax, N. S.

Appeals From Daughters Ruling Counsel for the Holland-American Line will appear before Federal Judge Learned Hand today to ask for a temporary order restraining Government officials from enforcing the Daughters' liquor ruling on the line's vessels.

Man With Money Bags Needed All the leaders made it plain that what was required, from their point of view, was a man with the money bags, who would supply the finances and they would do the practical work and carry out the orders.
