

BANDITS HOLD UP 3 MEN DOWNTOWN

Cover Victims With Revolvers While Relieving Them of Cash and Jewelry

LOOT VALUED AT $500

Four youthful bandits who used an automobile which they kept somewhat distance from the scene of their operations, held up three men at different points in the southern part of the city early today and gathered jewelry and cash amounting to more than $500.

All their victims reported the bandits worked quietly; in fact, were almost gentlemanly in their requests. There was strategy in their silent methods for they didn't attract attention and slipped away without leaving much in the shape of a clue to their identity.

A car stolen from the front of a downtown club is believed to have been used by the bandits in conveying them to the scenes of their depredations.

Shortly before 2 o'clock the bandits quietly approached Leon Sher, 312 Dickinson street, as he was passing Third and Wharton streets.

Methodical Robbers One of them asked to be directed to an address. While Sher pondered over the question the other three formed about him.

The first robber said "While you're thinking about it, suppose you just hand over your money."

Sher attempted to back away, but was quickly hemmed in.

"Just take it easy," said one of the men who pressed a revolver against Sher's stomach.

One of his companions who seemed to have a delicate touch then took Sher's gold watch and diamond pin.

Another of the bandits "frisked" Sher to see if anything was fastened to his person. He was then taken to a roll of notes which he quickly added to the other loot.

The men then told Sher to continue on quietly down the street. One of the bandits told him he would be within range for half a block.

When Sher had gone a few yards the men walked directly to Market street, a small thoroughfare nearby, and jumped into a large touring car.

They rolled away as leisurely as though going home after spending a pleasant evening.

The next customers stopped by the bandits were Fena Solillo, 125th and Dickinson streets, and Dominick Picconi, 232 League street. Both were accosted as they alighted from a taxicab, near Front and Christian streets.

Joked With Victims Stepping briskly from the big touring car, one of the bandits approached Solillo and remarked that "must be a mistake" to be sitting around in a taxicab.

Solillo said jokingly that Picconi was the one who was flush.

"We will examine both of you," said one of the bandits.

Solillo and Picconi were inclined to show fight, but three automatic pistols aimed them to change their mind. They were requested to get into the touring car.

While two of the men cuffed one of the bandits took $185 from Solillo and $65 from Picconi. The men then backed away. One of the bandits, Picconi a pack of cigarettes and told him to divide them with his friend.

The four bandits then stepped into their car and rolled away.

BIG BABOON HUNT EXCITES BABYLON

Great Ape Attacks Boy and is Driven Off by Dog

New York, Nov. 4.—(By A. P.)—A big baboon, thought to have escaped from a run-running ship, is being sought in the vicinity of Babylon, on Long Island.

One of the first to see the animal, one William Ellinger, was knocked down by it during an encounter several days ago.

Young Ellinger, son of the caretaker on the estate of Mrs. W. L. Hawkins, came suddenly upon the baboon as he was walking along the banks of a creek looking after muskrat traps.

The great ape had started to tear the dog's clothing when the German police dog rushed in, only to be knocked back by a sweep of the baboon's long arm.

The dog returned to the attack and after a brief encounter the ape fled.

Saved by U. S. Flag

VOSKENI ANNANIAN Armenian, now in this city, who was saved from the Turks by seeking protection of the American flag.

PRETTY ARMENIAN SAVED BY U. S. FLAG

Girl Tells of Horrors During Burning of Smyrna by the Turks

IS HERE TO GO TO SCHOOL

Saved from death only by the protection of the American flag during the Turkish massacres of the Greeks and Armenians in Smyrna, Miss Voskenti Annanian today told a pathetic story of her experiences.

She is in this city with another girl refugee, the first to reach here from the Smyrna district.

Behind her lie the horrors that have scarred her memory with blood-pictures of boys and girls massacred and hocked to pieces before her eyes.

Before her lies the vision of a higher education at Northwestern University, at Chicago, where an association of young students will help to take the sadness from her eyes and restore the glow of youth.

One of three refugees brought to this country by Miss Katherine Reynolds McCormick, a worker of the Near East Relief, the young girl—she is but nineteen years old—told a story that brought tears to the eyes.

The two other girls found by Miss McCormick in Constantinople are Miss Nevart Mousavian, twenty years old, and Miss Zerouhi Kalendarian, both of whom will attend Goucher College in Baltimore.

"It was the American flag that saved me," Miss Annanian said today. "When we heard the Turks were coming we fled to the Near East Relief orphanage that had been brought to the city by American soldiers and could, therefore, by the Americans, be stripped. At 11 o'clock the Turkish soldiers entered the city and there began a scene of murder, pillage and complete atrocities that I can not tell.

"From my window I could see terrible sights. A boy I knew was hocked to pieces by the soldiers in the street. A little girl, seven years old, her face mutilated, fell dead on our door step. In the morning we were given the protection of a Turkish policeman under orders from the American Consul.

"All my people had taken refuge under foreign flags, but the American flag was the safest of all. A few days later the fire started. With 400 boys orphaned the officials of the home, my mother and myself were forced out on the street.

"We paraded from one place of safety to another as the flames pursued us. At our head was carried an American flag and at our feet a tin carrying another. They kept us from molestation. Soon thirteen girls who had become separated from the refugees of the girls' orphanage, joined us and fled, too, found protection under the flag.

"No water or food for two days. The boys were suffering. No place to stay. At night we were roped in and the flames were placed in conical positions. They were placed in front of an Armenian woman's house and she gave us her last bit of flour which we made into cakes for the boys.

"As we were taken on board the American destroyer Lichfield and carried to safety in Constantinople. There I met Miss McCormick and now I am here.

PUT PINCHOT LEAD AT 250,000 OR MORE

Republicans Confident Forester Will Have Easy Sweep on Tuesday

WOMEN TO SWELL TOTAL

Rival Nominees At Polls Tuesday

UNITED STATES SENATORS For Old Knox-Crow Seat David A. Reed, Republican. Samuel E. Shull, Democratic. William J. Burke, Progressive. For Old Penrose Seat George Wharton Pepper, Republican. Fred B. Kerr, Democratic. Earl W. Thompson, Progressive.

GOVERNOR Gifford Pinchot, Republican. John A. McSparran, Democratic.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR David J. Davis, Republican. Robert E. Pattison, Jr., Democratic.

SECRETARY OF INTERNAL AFFAIRS James F. Woodward, Republican. A. Marshall Thompson, Democratic.

JUDGE OF THE SUPERIOR COURT Robert S. Gawthrop, Republican. Henry C. Niles, Democratic.

However violently they may differ on other aspects of the campaign, Republican and Democratic State leaders agree on the proposition that Gifford Pinchot, nominee for Governor, and the whole Republican ticket will sweep Philadelphia in the State-wide election Tuesday.

The only question is the size of the majority. Thomas F. Watson, chairman of the Republican City Committee, and Councilman "Bill" Roper, chairman of the Pinchot campaign, predict that the Republicans will carry the city with a majority of at least 175,000.

Democratic leaders, through their spokesman, John F. Short, of Clearwater, said that John A. McSparran, Democratic nominee for Governor, would get about 100,000 votes in Philadelphia. Republican leaders say that the Democrats will not poll more than 50,000 or 60,000 at the outside.

Democrats Are Hopeful Approximately 375,000 men and women are registered in Philadelphia for Tuesday's general election. Of these only about 32,000 or 33,000 are enrolled as Democrats. About 15,000 are registered, but not enrolled, as Democrats. They can vote, however. Approximately 325,000 are enrolled as Republicans.

W. Harry Baker, chairman of the State League of Women Voters, and other State leaders believe that Mr. Pinchot and the Republican ticket will have a majority of about 250,000 in the State at large.

And George S. Oliver, in a wire to State League of Women Voters, predicted that Allegheny County would give Pinchot and the whole Republican ticket a majority of 75,000 to 100,000.

In the approaching election men and women voters of Pennsylvania will elect United States Senators, a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of Internal Affairs, Judge of the Superior Court, thirty-two members of the State House of Representatives and twenty-eight State Senators.

Voters will also pass on a proposed amendment to the State Constitution which would open the way for a greater measure of home rule for cities.

Philadelphia Gains House Seat

One interesting result of the election will be that Philadelphia will gain one Congressman. Formerly only six Congressmen were elected here, but now seven will be chosen. It is expected that the city's delegation of forty-one members of the State House, under party lines, will be increased to forty-two.

HAVERFORD GUARDS PARRISH SOUVENIR

College Keeps Under Lock and Key Famous Notebook of Chemist-Artist

QUAIN DRAWINGS FEATURE

Maxfield Parrish's chemistry notebook—that remarkable souvenir of budding genius which is treasured in the Haverford College library—has become so endangered by the attention of the public that henceforth it will be kept under lock and key.

This move has been necessitated by the patent sufferings of the company of gnomes and whimsical beings who people its pages. A recent examination of the book by the library authorities revealed numerous faint, but unmistakable fingerprints, many of them encroaching upon the delicately tinted decorations painted there by a distinguished hand, thirty years ago. Part of the cover, too, is torn away.

And so, in order to preserve for posterity a priceless personal memento of one of the nation's greatest artists, the college has placed the notebook in a glass case protected from the light by a heavy green felt curtain. This the visitor may draw aside, peering in his one opened page which he may see.

No one but Maxfield Parrish—even a youthful Parrish—could have conceived of executed that page. No one not an artist of the highest order could have so invested the interior of a chemistry notebook with the sunset glow of exotic imaginings.

Amiable Grinning Gnomes It depicts an experiment in distillation—of a strictly Volsteadian nature—under the active supervision of a stout, rotund little gnome in jerkin and long-pointed shoes. One, perched upon the retort grins amiably at the leader and soursness a placid informing all concerned that this is a very important experiment.

Another experiment of a like order is depicted in a sketch of a stream of water flowing from an exquisitely designed fountain, fashioned as a lion's head. Yet another portrays a tiny, demure, presumably before his fall, putting a new lease on life in holding a flame beneath a test tube. Every succeeding page has some new surprise.

The fifty-second experiment is an undetermined species, which displays the characteristic peculiarities of the stork, the pelican and the dodo at one time. The combined effect is striking. Moreover, the creature has an air of merriment, as though it had noticed a spot on the reader's nose, and didn't intend to tell.

Intricately Garbed Individual On the last page, devoted to a brief exposition of what takes place when the reaction occurs serves also as a support for an intricately garbed individual with a perpetually surprised expression, whose chief eyes are fixed on the resources of the artist's paint box.

All the captions and titles are lettered and illuminated with a sure but sensitive hand, displaying in every line the workings of an extremely active imagination. The very writing, neatly lined and spaced in India ink, has the aesthetic character of the mind and eye of the artist.

Room Decorations Gone Many years ago there was a room at Haverford which was proudly exhibited as Parrish's. The ceiling was painted like the deep-blue vault of night, with twinkling stars and constellations. The walls were flying birds, fairies and castles, born in his dreams and placed there by the wizardry of his hand.

But the wizardry, alas, was replaced by the ordinary patterns, and the sky and the castles disappeared. Today only the notebook remains. In its display is this inscription, written in ink by the artist, to his former teacher:

"Dr. Hall—Talk about feats of memory I met two men at the celebration of the centennial of the American flag. They said it should be at Haverford, so here it is.
