Once-Powerful Exile Remains at Doorn With His Second Bride

POMP AND GLOOM MINGLE

By Associated Press

Doorn, Nov. 6.—Count Hohenzollern and his bride, Princess Hermine, of Rouss, began their honeymoon today with no place to go. They were married at the House of Doorn, where the one-time Kaiser spends his hours in exile, and there they remain today.

The ceremonies that united them, both civil and religious, were witnessed by twenty-eight guests and were kept from the sight of the villagers of Doorn and a host of correspondents and cameramen with a secrecy that was both studied and mysterious.

To the twenty-eight who partook of the wedding repast, William was still "his majesty" and Hermine was her "serene highness." William addressed her as "your majesty," but to many of the gamins and the curious group-ups who pecked through the gate and the hedges at the bridal party, as they entered and left the gate lodge of the estate where the civil ceremony was performed, William was just a poor unfortunate target for quips and bores.

Princess Posing as Her Sister

But those on the inside had a laugh on those who could not get in. As a joke on the curious, they considered it nothing short of colossal the way Princess Ida, sister of the bride, had successfully posed as Hermine at the Amersfoort station Saturday evening when a fleet of fine automobiles led every one to think William's fiancée had arrived. Meanwhile, Hermine had left the train at Apeldoorn and gone unnumbered to her castle home.

Some of the devout Sabbatarian villagers thought it was simply awful that the exile of Doorn selected Sunday as his wedding day. Not a few of them looked with disfavor upon him becoming a bridegroom within nineteen months after the death of the woman who shared his glories and his sorrows, the former Empress Augusta Victoria.

Several of the children of that first union saw their father married yesterday, but the wife of the former Crown Prince did not accompany her husband to Doorn, as the nuptials met with her disapproval.

William began his wedding day with breakfast at 9 o'clock. Soon the guests began to arrive. At 11:30 the civil ceremony was started in the lodge where Hermine had spent the night. The register signed and other details cared for, the wedding party went up the winding path to the castle, where the religious ceremony was immediately carried out in the main hall. Then came a reception in the smoking room followed by lunch and the bridegroom and the bride sat at the head of an oblong table.

William wore the full dress uniform of the Imperial Guards. From both castle and lodge the black and white Hohenzollern banner fluttered. But beyond the limits of the estate no manifestations of popular rejoicing were to be seen or heard.

Bright uniforms and showy epaulettes flared at the wedding ceremony, but the whole effect was almost pathetic in contrast to the bridegroom's first marriage in 1881, when as Crown Prince of Germany he wedded Augusta Victoria, daughter of Grand Duke Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein.

It is only a few miles from here to the German border by the Doorn road, but to the bridegroom this distance is impassable. Wilhelm Hohenzollern, erstwhile War Lord and Kaiser of Germany, will not travel these few miles on his honeymoon. Spectators of former greatness must have stalked through the bridal halls yesterday as memories of that other marriage obtruded upon the exile's mind.

The two ceremonies yesterday—a civil contract, drawn up and signed by "Wilhelm II" and "Hermine, Reuss," as they affixed their names, and the second a religious ceremony conducted by the former court chaplain, Dr. Vogel, according to the Lutheran rites.

Chill Rain Spoils the Day
The day began clear and bright—"Hohenzollern weather"—but soon turned to showery, and a chill rain fell when the former Emperor's black car drove from the castle to the lodge at the appointed time for the civil ceremony.

Perched on the top of motors, the crowd of observers were able to discern through the thinning trees of the castle grounds some of the notables—former Crown Prince Frederick William in uniform of the Uhlans, Von der Goltz and other old-time war lords, who also were in gala attire.

The procession was greeted with fraternal cheers and there was some booing. When the bridegroom's automobile, which carried also the bride, returned to the castle after the ceremony the blinds were down and the occupants were invisible.

At the religious ceremony, which began with the singing of the Lutheran hymn, "Jesus Gohr Varan," Pastor Vogel preached from the text "Now Abideith Faith, Hope and Charity." The bridal couple occupied carved gilt arm chairs surmounted by crowns, while the numerous guests were seated in rows behind them.

"Now the joyful day has arrived," declaimed the minister, "when His Majesty and Her Serene Highness join hands."

Familiar Text in Sermon

He recalled that the same text had served at the golden wedding of William I and at the bridegroom's own silver wedding. "The bride," said he, "has left fatherland and friends to unite her life with that of His Majesty, whose faith has sustained him in circumstances which would have driven others to despair. As an evidence of faith, he pointed out that the "Kaiser" conducted religious services on every Lord's day in his own home. He was tribute to the virtues of the late Empress and Princess Hermine's former husband, referring to the "Kaiserin" as the ideal of German womanhood.

"Love each other as God loves you," he admonished, "and you shall prevail over all evil report."

"The reading of the reading of the marriage service, rings were exchanged and the hymns "So Nimm denn Meine Hande" and "Herr Meiner Seele" were sung.

After the exchange of rings in the religious ceremony, the newly wed couple knelt before the altar to receive the blessings of Pastor Vogel. While the couple were kneeling, the bridegroom at the conclusion of the wedding the bride held her three-year-old daughter by the hand.

The wedding presents included flowers from Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and a beautiful antique vase which the former Kaiser recently saw and admired in the house of a Dutch gentleman.

The black and white Hohenzollern banner flew from both castle and lodge, but nowhere else were flags to be seen or any other demonstration of popular rejoicing—not even the music of wedding bells, or the tolling of which the bridegroom had previously expressed a wish. The villagers regarded the affair in the nature of a free entertainment and last night Doorn was steeped in its habitual Sabbath calm. The castle remained brilliantly lighted, however, in contrast to its usual darkness, and it was reported that William had elected to spend the evening at home with his wife while the guests dined at Amersfoort with Count von Bentinck, the exile's first host, who returned from abroad for the marriage.

The former Emperor personally inspected with the greatest minuteness every detail of the arrangements, and he forbade the servants to leave the castle until the day was over, on pain of instant dismissal.

The Secretary of the Commune, who officiated with Burgomaster Schinmuller-Ponnik at the civil ceremony, which took place in the left wing of the gate lodge, said the questions were first put to the contracting parties in Dutch and then in German, and at the conclusion of the formalities the Burgomaster delivered a short congratulatory address in German. The couple then passed to an anteroom, where they received the congratulations of the former Crown Prince and other near relatives.

Now you can have copper

EVEN the first cost of a copper roof is now much lower than you would expect. Compared with the cost of a wooden roof, you will still find copper higher, but much less so than heretofore.

When you compare the cost per year of service of a copper roof with roofs of wood or other materials, the advantage is all on the side of copper.

The copper roof never needs painting, patching, or repairing; there are no "upkeep" or "maintenance" charges.

Copper roofs are everlasting, for copper is indestructible. It does not rust nor rot; it neither warps, cracks, splits, nor curls; it never needs resurfacing. Copper is fireproof.

Here in America there are copper roofs more than a hundred years old, while Europe has copper roofs that have seen centuries of service.

Anaconda Copper Roofings may be had in the dulled metal, to be weathered by nature to the rich verdigris green of old bronze; or they may be had pre-weathered in shades of green, red, brown, and blue; the solid colors and blended combinations of colors provide roofs to harmonize with any scheme of architecture or landscape.

It is impossible here to tell you all the reasons why a copper roof is best. But we shall be glad to send you free our booklet "Copper Roofings," and to give you further information if you will call on us.
