Places to Be Filled At the Polls Today

Philadelphia is voting on State and national officers.

Philadelphia will elect seven members of Congress—one more than heretofore, owing to the re-apportionment.

The new congressional district was made by splitting the old Sixth or West Philadelphia-Germantown District into two sections.

Philadelphia will elect forty-one members of the State House of Representatives.

Three members of the Philadelphia delegation to the House will be women.

Five State Senators will be elected by Philadelphia. The extra one will be chosen because of the death of Senator Vane, who was a hold-over Senator.

The five slated to be elected are Senator Salus, Second District; Senator Patton, Fourth; Senator Woodward, Eighth; Thaddeus S. Krause, Eighth, and William S. Vane in the First.

Philadelphia's men and women voters, with the Republicans vastly in the majority, began balloting at 7 o'clock this morning, not to settle any local feuds, because there are none, but to swell the statewide totals for the Republican State and national ticket.

The damp, foggy, dismal weather which greeted the election officers when they opened the polls this morning put the leaders on their mettle, because it put every one else out of humor for voting.

The leaders took a look at the skies, grabbed some breakfast and a raincoat, and hurried out to give first aid to the voters.

Charles Conner, one of the job early and stayed out in the districts all morning in an effort to make good his prophecy.

Mr. Conner, leader of the Seventh Ward, stayed there at work all morning, instead of visiting headquarters at Eleventh and Chestnut streets.

Even Henry C. Davis, executive director of the City Center, got on the job early and stayed out in the districts all morning in an effort to make good his prophecy.

Predicts Pinchot Landslide

Because of this fear of what the weather might do to the vote, not a single worker was sent to the polls for the forenoon hours at the City or State headquarters.

Tom Watson, chairman of the Republican City Committee, predicted a landslide of 185,000 for the City Center yesterday, got on the job early and stayed out in the districts all morning in an effort to make good his prophecy.

Baker is Optimistic

W. Harry Baker, Republican State chairman, who reached the headquarters from Harrisburg early this afternoon, predicted Pinchot would carry with a margin of at least 200,000 majority over McGowan.

Mr. Baker said reports from all parts of the State indicated there is "nothing to it" but an overwhelming victory for Pinchot.

Even Henry C. Davis, executive director of the City Center, got on the job early and stayed out in the districts all morning in an effort to make good his prophecy.

Some Pertinent Facts For All Voters Today

Polls open from 7 A. M. to 7 P. M.

All men and women voters on the registration lists are entitled to a ballot.

Even those who are registered as non-partisan may vote.

Approximately 370,000 are qualified by registration, and of these about 324,000 are enrolled as Republicans.

A cross (X) mark in the Republican Party square in the first column on the ballot carries a vote for Gifford Pinchot for Governor and the local Republican national, State and local ticket.

Voters may also vote for candidates individually by making separate cross marks immediately to the right of the name of each candidate.

A vote in a party square does not carry with it a vote on the proposed constitutional amendments, which must be voted on separately.

ARCHITECTS URGE ORIGINAL FAIR PLAN

Resolutions at Meeting Cite Benefits That Would Accrue to City

WANT NEW SEWAGE PLANT

Adoption of the original plan for the Sequi-Centennial Exposition on account of the general benefits which accrue to the city in the way of permanent improvements from an artistic and sanitary standpoint was advocated in resolutions passed last night at a regular meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

The meeting was held at the T-Square Club.

After pointing out the necessity for improving the banks of the Schuylkill River as part of the fair plan, it is urged that plans be adopted for purification of the river below the dam.

This could be done, it is said, by means of separate sewage disposal systems which would cost less than the present project for sewage disposal, and it is contended that the money thereby saved would almost pay for the fair itself.

The resolution says, among other things: "The present method under consideration by the city of taking care of the sewage is both unnecessarily expensive and harmful to the city, and it would have to be built all at one time, while the taking care of the separate outlets locally could be undertaken at a much smaller cost and a reduction of cost over the other system that the saving would almost pay for the entire exposition."

The Philadelphia Chapter advocates the adoption of the original plan accepted by the Sequi-Centennial Committee because:

(a) The Parkway would be greatly benefited by a permanent improvement for the city in a short space of time.

(b) The present unsightly banks of the Schuylkill River, east to Vine street or better, to the market street, which are now unused and waste land, in addition would be reclaimed, and probably a great lasting benefit derived by the city.

(c) The natural beauty and advantages derived by using the banks of the Schuylkill River are too strong to be overlooked in favor of other locations, where such facts would have to be created artificially.

(d) The practicability of keeping the fair as compact as possible and near the city so that the housing of the people will be most convenient.

(e) The excellent transportation facilities both by rail and auto provided for by this plan.

Regardless of the Sequi-Centennial Exposition, the Chapter of the American Institute of Architects most strongly advocates the adoption and immediate building of separate sewage disposal plants to purify the river, and the abandonment of the present project to carry all sewage to a large plant located south of Grays Ferry bridge, this latter scheme being unnecessarily expensive and long in execution.

TRIES TO END HER LIFE AFTER STABBING SON

Mrs. Bellezo Jumps From Lehigh Valley Railway Bridge

Easton, Pa., Nov. 7.—Mrs. Anna Maria Bellezo, aged seventy-one years, Philadelphia, whose son John died Sunday morning from a stab wound inflicted by her hand, made an attempt to commit suicide this morning when she jumped over the Lehigh Valley Railroad bridge to the tracks on the other railroad below. Her recovery is deemed unlikely.

MISTRIAL OF R. R. SHOPMEN

Four Former Railroad Workers Accused of Killing Non-Union Man

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 7.—(By A. P.)—The trial of South W. Poston, C. M. Meade, F. A. Miller and Albert Johns, former railroad shopmen, charged with murder in connection with the fatal wounding of Charles Lanier, a non-union shop worker, ended in a mistrial today when the jury reported that it was hopelessly deadlocked and was discharged. The case was given to the jury Friday.

Lanier was killed when the automobile in which he was riding to work with two other men was fired on from ambush.

Edgar W. Lank, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, said he had observed a light vote in West Philadelphia, where he had visited some of the divisions. "However, this is good Democratic weather," he added.

Administration Facing Crucial Test in Ohio—President Votes by Mail

Washington, Nov. 7.—Fair weather prevailed over most of the central States today except in the Northwest and with congressional races expected to play a leading part in the determination of the control of the lower House of Congress at the next session, a heavy vote generally was polled.

The bad weather in the Northwestern States was expected to be a leading factor in the outcome of the races in the States affected because of the alignment of the farmer vote against other elements.

In North Dakota especially, the snowstorm and the weather outlook today increased the hopes of supporters of J. E. T. O'Connor, Democratic nominee for United States Senator against the Non-Partisan League induced candidate, Lynn J. Frazier, running under the Republican banner.

In the Eastern States generally fair weather was reported. It was clear in New York City, and the leaders of both parties were jubilant over the prospect of a heavy poll. A light rain was falling in Boston, Portland, New Haven and other points in New England, but the voting was reported brisk, particularly in Boston, where the women were flocking to the polls in record-breaking numbers.

Western New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and parts of New England were reported cloudy. Clear weather prevails over Western Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio.

Nine of the thirty-three States electing United States Senators today are in the Middle West.

Administration Test in Ohio

In Ohio the Harding Administration is put to the supreme test in the off-year election today. Here in the home State of the President, Congressman Fess a Harding Republican, is challenging the administration in the country's foremost Democratic, Atlee Pomerene.

Missouri presented a "wet" and "dry" fight in the senatorial contest between Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, and Reginald Brewster, Republican. Reed opposed by organized "drys" and Wilson Democrats, relies on the support of "wets" Republicans to desert Brewster.

Aside from the Democratic candidacy of a woman, Mrs. J. J. Hooper, who is opposing Senator La Follette, the chief outside interest in Wisconsin centers in the candidacy of Victor Berger, Socialist, for the congressional seat to which he was twice elected and both times unseated.

Indiana, the Democratic woman, Mrs. Anna Dickie Olsen, is a candidate for the United States Senate in the three-cornered race in Minnesota with Senator Charles A. Johnson, Republican, and Dr. Henrik Shipstead, a Farmer-Labor candidate.

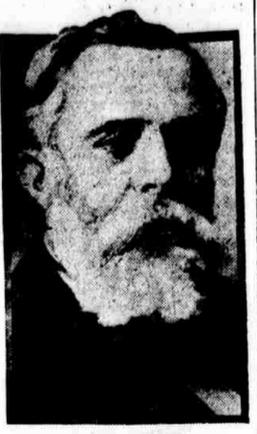

Revolt in Iowa

In Iowa one of the features in the senatorial contest was the interest in the side of the administration against the party nominee, Smith W. Brookhart. Clyde L. Herring, the Democratic candidate, expected support from the Republican party.

Indiana, the Democratic woman, Mrs. Anna Dickie Olsen, is a candidate for the United States Senate in the three-cornered race in Minnesota with Senator Charles A. Johnson, Republican, and Dr. Henrik Shipstead, a Farmer-Labor candidate.

President Harding's vote had been sent by mail to his home at 10:30 o'clock and he was in his office at the usual hour.

JACOB GIMBEL DIES AT ATLANTIC CITY

One of Store Founders Succumbs at Age of Seventy-one

LEADER IN CHARITY WORK

Jacob Gimbel, one of the founders of Gimbel Brothers' store, died this morning at his Atlantic City home, 128 South De Lancey place. He was seventy-one years old and had not been in health for about a year.

Mr. Gimbel, a bachelor, was one of the organizers and the first president of the Federation of Jewish Charities, to which he contributed heavily. He also was the originator of the Gimbel Foundation, created for the welfare of Gimbel employees.

The eldest of seven brothers, Mr. Gimbel was affectionately called the "Judge" by members of the family because of the keen business judgment he displayed. All major propositions for his store were submitted for his opinion, and an unfavorable judgment from him generally meant the end of the proposal.

Mr. Gimbel was born September 29, 1851, in Vincennes, Ind., the son of Adam Gimbel, a prosperous merchant. He and his brothers were educated in New York, and returned to Indiana, where they entered business.

The Gimbel business proper was founded in Milwaukee in 1887, and in 1894 the brothers began mercantile life in Philadelphia at Ninth and Market streets. The business gradually expanded until the present store resulted.

The funeral will be held next Thursday, at 10:30 o'clock, in the Rodeph Shalom Synagogue, Broad and Mt. Vernon streets.

WOMAN THIEF CONFESSES

Brooklyn's Female Robber Admits Taking Gems Worth $10,000

New York, Nov. 7.—(By A. P.)—Mrs. Catherine Flynn, wife of a mail carrier, admitted in magistrate's court today that she was the woman Raffles who had robbed nearly a dozen Brooklyn homes, getting jewelry valued at $10,000. She was held for the Grand Jury.

According to the police, Mrs. Flynn told them she had gained entrance to the houses by answering advertisements of furniture for sale, lifting the gems under the very noses of the housewives she visited.

Held for Negro of Watch

Harry Starr, a Negro, living in Garrett street, was brought before Magistrate Renshaw in Central Station to answer the charge of stealing a watch chain from John J. Lynch, 1843 South street. Lynch said the watch and chain are worth $75, and that they were taken from his pocket at Nineteenth and South streets on September 11. Starr is being held under $500 bond.

Parents Come From New York After News of Accident in Game Saturday

Andrew Lang, a University of Pennsylvania freshman football player, who was injured in the game with Mercersburg Saturday, is making a hard fight for his life in the University Hospital.

"My boy is wonderfully brave and cheerful," said his mother, with tears in her eyes, as she peered up and down the corridor outside of her son's room. "He has a bulldog grip on himself."

"I am so broken up that I cannot even think what I mean," she cried. "Yes, I suppose he is a hero, but it is hard to be the mother of a hero. Come and see his room."

And she pointed out the mute tokens of friendship and esteem—bulletins of friendly and optimistic messages and great bunches of all kinds of gay flowers sent to cheer her boy.

STEVENS TO FORCE PROBERS TO ARREST OR LET HIM ALONE

Mrs. Hall's Brother, Tired of Shadowing, Plans Trip Around World

WIFE TELLS OF DECISION TO BRING CASE TO CRISIS

"Time to Pack Belongings," She Says, in Criticizing Murder Investigation

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 7.—Henry Stevens, brother of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and "unnamed suspect" in the Hall-Mills murder mystery, is about to leave the country.

This news would be sensational if "Captain Bunkie," as the once famous writer shot is known, were planning to slip away in secret.

Instead, it has its grimly humorous aspect, because he has told the world his plans and is waiting hopefully for results. What he wants, according to a public statement, made by his wife in his absence, is to be arrested or let alone entirely.

He has determined to force the hands of the authorities; to make them "put up or shut up."

Simultaneously with announcement of Stevens' determination, it was rumored in New Brunswick that when the Grand Jury finally gets round to the long promised indictments, three persons would be charged with the murder, two men and a woman, and that neither "Captain Bunkie" nor "Willie" Stevens was to be indicted. According to the story, they have been eliminated definitely.

Tired of Being "Shadowed"

Almost since the discovery of the murder of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, brother-in-law, and Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills, singer in the choir of St. John the Evangelist's Church, "Captain Bunkie" has been under surveillance.

He says he is tired of it, and if the police have anything on him they had better make a quick move, for he will be off for a trip around the world as soon as he can make his arrangements. State troopers, according to the Stevens family, have pestered the life out of "Captain Bunkie" by "shadowing" him in ridiculous disguises at Lavallette, New Jersey, and he has remained in his summer cottage.

This shadowing has continued, Mr. Stevens complains, in spite of the fact that he has proved an alibi for every hour of the night of the murder.

Mrs. Stevens Talks

When newspapermen called at her home, a veritable show place facing the beach, Mrs. Stevens received them graciously, but she expressed her aversion to an opportunity to give her views on the subject. She was becomingly attired and the tasteful furnishings of her home showed that the reports concerning the means of Mr. and Mrs. Stevens had not been exaggerated.

While she spoke there was a tinge of levity in her manner, especially when she discussed the methods used by State

MRS. HAMMERSTEIN MISSING; POLICE TOLD

Has Not Been Seen Since She Left House of Friend Yesterday

New York, Nov. 7.—(By A. P.)—A general alarm for Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein, widow of the impresario, has been sent out by the police at the request of Mrs. Julia Farley, a friend, who has befriended Mrs. Hammerstein since she was found a few weeks ago penniless and ill on a bench in Central Park. Mrs. Farley told police that Mrs. Hammerstein, accompanied by her little boy, left her home yesterday morning. A note left by Mrs. Hammerstein for Max Rubin, a student at Columbia University, who had planned a benefit for her at Carnegie Hall next Monday night, read:

"I wish to thank you so much for all you have done for me. I am very tired and very weak. I can stand it no longer."

According to Mrs. Farley, Mrs. Hammerstein was despondent and said to her a short time ago. "I wish I were dead. If I am found dead some night on Oscar's grave."

Dr. H. A. Nobles Detects Signs of Shock or Volcanic Eruption

Signs of a severe earthquake shock, or possibly a volcanic eruption somewhere in the vicinity of the Antilles, the Gulf Islands, were detected here today by Dr. H. A. Nobles, 1627 Sanson street.

Observations of the winds and clouds and the nature of the seismograph, Dr. Nobles says, indicate that the eruption last night six or seven hundred miles to the south was accompanied by great volcanic activity. Dr. Nobles says that the disturbance was a violent one.

Walsh, although an inexperienced man beneath the ground, saved his life by keeping "in the air" and lighting a cigarette and watching the smoke to see in which direction the air was going. When found he was partly overcome, but he regained his full mental faculties a few minutes after the inhaler was placed in his lips.

Walsh had moistened a handkerchief in his coffee and spread it as a mask to keep the noxious gas from his throat.

RECLUSE, 71, BURNED TO DEATH IN STORE

Henry Ketterer, of Bustleton, Found in Ruins as Policeman Rushes to Rescue

Bustleton, Pa., Nov. 7.—Throughout the long black night, silent as death but for the chattering clinking of chains at slow intervals, the cage of the Rellly mine was lowered and raised and brought forth its blackened dead. By 9 o'clock this morning fifty bodies had been brought up out of the death pit.

A summary of the situation so far as it is known is as follows:

Men in mine when explosion occurred, not more than 112.

Probable number of dead, 80.

Bodies recovered, 50.

Bodies located in mine, 32.

Injured in hospital, 17.

Total accounted for, 95.

WOUNDED CARED FOR FIRST

The number of men who went to work yesterday is not definitely known, despite the State law that provides for the checking of every person entering a mine. It was pointed out that if the total was 112, bodies of the missing seven men would probably be found in the eighth heading where the water had arisen so rapidly that exploration this morning had been impossible.

Pumps, damaged by the explosion, are being repaired as rapidly as possible, while a force of workers is cutting a passageway through the coal between the eighth and ninth headings. It is hoped the last of the unexplored galleries will be reached within a few hours.

During the entire night, under the direction of George Nicholson, superintendent of an adjoining mine, repairs descended the 100-foot shaft to explore the remainder of thirteen headings, and to bring back what dead lay at the foot of the shaft. Until a late hour last night rescuing parties brought up none of the dead, but with doctors and a number of priests attempted to resuscitate those bodies which showed the least spark of life.

Gruesome scenes during the long night was its sinister grating silence. Twives and mothers, who stood in a downpour of rain all afternoon, were persuaded to return to their homes.

Ridge jumped his horse over fences and cut across fields to reach the burning house, believing he could save the aged man.

The entire structure was in flames near the remains of his bed. It had when he reined in his animal in front of the house. The second floor fell in, sending clouds of sparks and embers from the heat-broken windows.

Ridge jumped his horse over fences and cut across fields to reach the burning house, believing he could save the aged man.

The aged recluse's only indulgence was his corncob pipe, which he smoked incessantly. Police believe he may have fallen asleep with the lighted pipe in his mouth. It was a thought a little oil stove he had in his room might have been knocked over accidentally.

It was popularly believed in that section that Ketterer had buried large sums of money in the cellar of his home. Detectives of the Tacony station went there this morning to search for the supposed buried treasure.

BEGIN BRINGING UP THE DEAD

In the car, wrapped in oily canvas, lay the men dead in death, who had been buried earlier than the sun's trip across the sky had been laughing with their buddies, strong for a day's work. Perhaps there were two men, or even three, piled one on top of the other.

Throughout the night death watches carried the bodies to the temporary morgue in Miners' Hall, about a half mile away, and here something of the agonizing scenes of yesterday afternoon continued. Relatives waited outside the door of the rough wooden building, straining to catch sight of the faces of the men who were being brought up.

Families Identify Their Dead

Many heartrending scenes took place as the families of the dead miners fled through Miners' Hall to identify their dead. The bodies lay in lines, and as they passed, they were made a loud bearing the dead man's name was heard upon the body.

The wife of James Clawson had to be carried from the building when she discovered her husband's body. Falling across it, she sobbed, "My Jimmie, my Jimmie." Attendants and friends led her from the hall, with her three small children hanging to her dress and crying.
