Black Frocks

Black still goes on apace for both afternoon and evening, and a showing of one of our most fashionable specialties is indicated in this frock in a number of black frocks redeemed from their monotony by insets of velour. This black crepe imports and black afternoons of purple crepe, and a black afternoon of purple crepe, and a black afternoon of purple crepe. The fact of it is that black frocks are the most popular. They are simply beset by insets of velour. They are one of the smartest trimming touches.

When Sewing

I always keep my ironing board and iron in the sewing room when dressing and ironing most of the new makes. It is surprising how much easier it makes dressing and how much neater are the results.—Mrs. G. D., in Good Housekeeping.
