Nancy Wynne Tells of the Dinner-Dance Given for Miss Margaret Logan-She Sees Smart Gowns at Charlotte Cushman Club Benefit-Miss Atterbury to Be Introduced Today

Broad Street Theatre was very interesting. As you know, it was for the benefit of the Charlotte Cushman Club, and was in charge of the Hon. Mrs. John Fortescue, of London, who is here for a few days visiting Miss Frances Griscom.

Griscom.

The dresses were really beautiful; the materials gorgeous, most of them velvets and brocades, and the colors wonderful. The models were some of the most attractive girls and women of this city, as well as the lovely Dolores of the singe.

Miss Ellen Douglas Lloyd, who is very blond and slight, first appeared in a fascinating frock, called "the blue bird," of turquoise blue velvet, made with a tight bodice and bouffant skirt, the hem of which was cut in scallops, which was ended with ermine, as well as the arinholes and bateau neck. Next came Mrs. Persifor Frazer, 3d, in a striking dress of black velvet, the skirt of which was cut almost to the knee at either side. This dress was also trimmed with ermine.

The charming Mrs. Hoffman Dolan were several lovely costumes, perhaps the most attractive of which was a striking and lace.

were several lovely costumes, perhaps the most attractive of which was a bridal dress of white satin and lace. made with panel of lace on either side and with wide lace sleeves. To me the prettiest of the dresses which Mrs. Wal-ter Waring Hopkinson wore was one of layers of yellow and white georgette crepe called "morning mist," if I am not mistaken. It was most becoming to Mrs. Hopkinson's blond coloring. Mrs. John B. Thayer made a stunning figure in a gorgeous cloth-of-gold gown, over which she later wore a hiplength cape of wide vertical stripes of gold and black. Mrs. Thayer also wore several other unusual dresses. Mrs. Randal Morgan and Mrs. Dobson Alterus looked very handsome in several different unusual costumes.

Miss Peggy Rosengarten, with her role vellow hair was striking in a very pale vellow hair, was striking in a very long chemise dress of jade green, and Miss Sarah Burringer, who is dark, provided a foil for a wonderful black and gold brocaded gown, with which she were a small turban of the same mathe ceremony. It was one of those awful moments when you are supposed to be as soleinn as soleinn can be, and then something as a sole of the sole of awful moments when you are supposed to be as solemn as solemn cmb be, and then somebody says the wrong thing and puts every one 'out of business.'

It had come to the zime in the ceremony when the bridegroom places the ring upon the finger of the bride and in solemn tones remarks: 'With this ring the strain on the best man, who had the ring all ready and was so relieved about it, and the ushers and bridesmaids who were so near they heard maids who were so near they heard plainly when the trembling bridegroom was heard to quaver: "And with all my worthless goods I thee endow."

NANCY WYNNE. SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

THE dinner-dance which Mr. and Mrs. Supplee gave last night at the Country Club for Margaret Logan was a beautiful affair. There were about a hundred girls and men of the debutante set. The rooms were lovely with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums. and the guests seated at small tables had a simply wonderful time.

Margaret, who is Mrs. Samuel Logan's daughter and lives in Chestnut Hill, wore the sweetest dress of pertwinkle blue georgette made with the fashionblue georgette made with rose-shapel petals, it was a French frock, I am sure, and was very dainty over a slip skirt of white satin.

The Country Club is an ideal place for entertaining. I often wonder why more people do not give dances there,
To be sure, it is not very accessible if
