ADAMS PENN CENTER FOR TOMORROW'S TEST

Heisman Will Start Coast | State-Penn to Honor Youth in Place of Dern Against Penn State

WORKOUT AT SHORE

By JOSEPH T. LABRUM

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 17. FTER one of the most spirited Adrills a University of Pennsylvania team has indulged in for years, Coach John W. Helsman announced last night that he would in all probability start Charley Adams, the Spokane, Washington, lad at center against Penn State tomorrow. Adams, who is the first substitute center on the varality team. tute center on the varsity team, sur-sed his fellow players and the coaches prised his fellow players and the coaches alike by turning up for practice yesterday afternoon, announcing himself to be in splendid shape. He says he has recovered from the attack of indigestion that laid him low for two days.

"You can tell the world for me," said Adams, during practice on the links of the Seaview Country Club, that there is nothing at all the matter with me, I seally think that I am in better condi-

he would start the game.
"Next to Dern, Adams is the best man in the squad," said Coach Gaston.
"I do not like the idea of taking Kehly out of his natural place at tackle and placing him in the center position."

TF ADAMS does start, and there is Levery reason to believe that he will, Gaston will use Thurman and Butherland at tackles, and Graf and Relly at the guard posts Ertreseag and Fairchild will be at the wings.

TACK DERN, regular center, worked out yesterday afternoon, but showed little of his old-time dash and pep. The knee he injured in the Pittsburgh game has been giving considerable trouble. has been giving considerable trouble. The conches expect to see Dern in the game before it is over, but doubt very much that he will be able to start.

With Adams in the line-up, the coaches figure that the Red and Blue will be in excellent shape to meet the Blue and White. Al Langdon, who was kicked on the head and doesn't remember what happened after the first nember what happened after the first period in the Pittsburgh game, romped around the impromptu gridiron pest cutside the country club like a regular ackfleid, at least at the start, against Penn State as started against Pitts-burgh. McGraw and Miller will be at the halfback points, with Hamer at fullback and Langdon at quarterback.

THE fact that Heisman gave out a statement saying that he would not start Sullivan means that the New York State lad will be on the sidelines until the start of the second period or until Penn has the ball in State's territory.

ACCORDING to Gaston, line coach.

Malvern School opened its doors for the first time this fall and commenced at the very beginning to devote much time toward the development of athletics. The student body consists of not more than 100, and nearly every one of that number is interested in some branch of sport.

"Athletics for every one" is the motto of the Rev. John A. McErhlain, dean and faculty discretor of athletics.

hands or feet. "However, I expect to see Mr. Baker some time today. He was in New York last night, but will be in town this infternoon."

In these November days Coach Bezdek leans more toward football than anything else. He is determined to offset the defeat by the Navy, which was stated for the should always remember that he should never pass up one opposing player to get another. In running a halfback should go with his head and body low with the ball stuck securely under the arm and with an eye to where he is going to run, after receiving the ball.

mer.

"Penn has a good team and we know it," continued the coach. "We are prepared to give them a hard fight. I look for an even game."

Any one who saw the State athletes when they breakfasted at the Hotel Walton or when they went through a snappy practice at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, St. Martins, where they will be quartered overnight, certainly would not think that they were here for a feetball same.

Must Take Care of Himself

H OW to protect oneself when tackled or taken out is one of the real secrets of how to be a football care of himself. Too many players lack this essential with the result that they are being injured frequently with the usual loss to their team.

Dodging when running with the ball onesting the actronum layers half-

There is little of the tense serious spirit in the outward appearance of the Nittany Lions. They are cheerful, witty and boyish. It looked like an excursion to view the historical points of the city rather than a football squad it all comes down to quick thought. A laffer "row ment" in the form of elevent.

ability to use the straight arm properly is absolutely essential. When runshould be held in the right arm and when to the left under the left arm. The ball should always be on the side away from the tacklers.

There is a knack in the way to fall when tackled that might mean a first down or loss of the ball on downs. A halfback should always remember to get his full length when tackled. A couple of inches often means a first down and a possible score and a back who gets his length is usually one who has learned the game from A to Z and is therefore that much more valuable to his team.

WHEN tackled near the sidelines a halfback should throw himself out of bounds wherever possible so that the ball can be brought in 15 yards, giving his team more ground in which to make an advance.

"We are going to start Wentz at fullback," said Bezdek. "This is the first time we have used him at the beginning of a game. He was a lineman at the start of the season, but was converted into a back, and has been showing such excellent form that we can't keep him off the varsity.

"Singer, our regular fullback, was declared ineligible recently, and this, too, hurt us. We have lost a number of men through deficiencies in their studies, but as I said before, if we have ideals we must sacrifice for them.

Should Be Sure Tackler

On THE defense, a halfback should be a sure tackler, because he gets lots of opportunity to test his tackling ability when a runner breaks through the line. He should be able to break up the interference on long and wide end runs. He should always keep the runner ahead of him so as to push him out of bounds. He should always be ready if the man cuts back to make the tackle. A halfback is always on the wing, never behind the line of scrimings.

should drop further back, so as to be in a position to cover his man. If an endrun or line buck is expected, he should move up to protect the line and be prepared to make a tackle.

Getting back to running with the ball for a moment. The halfback who is able to cover up the ball when run-ning, or who can cloak his run as to fool the opposition, is a halfback worth while. A balfback must be able to disguise his play. He should not look
