INGE HOSPITALS FOR DRUG ADDICTS

and Fire Surgeons at First Convention Here Advosate Medical Treatment

HEALTH PROBLEMS

Police and fire surgeons of several elties are meeting in the Bellevue-Stratford today to organize the National Association of Police and Fire Surgeons and Medical Directors of Civil Service Commissions and to discuss problems arising in the administration of their duties.

The problem of the drug user will be one of the important subjects before the convention, and a change in the method of handling this class of prisoners will be urged.

ers will be urged. Instead of confining addicts to prisons while treatment is administered, the physicians feel much better results could be obtained by committing them to hospitals. The present custom of dering them as criminals, they foel, is wrong.

Other problems include a study of means of improving and protecting the health of police and firemen and determination of more efficient means of treatment for injuries.

Dr. Hubley R. Owen, chief surgeon of the Philadelphia Police Department, is father of the idea of a national association and suggested it a year ago to three visiting police and fire surgeons who were his guests.

They are Dr. Joseph Smith, chief of the medical staff of the New York Fire Department; Dr. Charles Russell, of this city, and Dr. Daniel L. Borden, chief surgeon of the Washington Police Department. All were impressed by the idea and a movement to establish the idea and a movement to establish in charge of parishes at Landisville and
