Sugarman and Richie Dieghan, with three field goals, and Elmer Ripley, with four, were the Coatesville stars.

The Steel Heddle girls furnished the opposition, but did not do it very well. They may be all right among fives of their own caliber, but they were no match for the speedy Columbus five. The final score, 20 to 4, does not reveal the superiority the winners displayed over their rivals.

It was the second time the Heddle maidens have fallen before the winners' attack. One thing we can say and that is they are game for punish-

The Daughters of Columbus are a well-conched and brilliant array of girl basketeers. Needless to say, it is impossible to compare them with masculine basketball players, but it will take a mighty fine girl team to turn them back.

And the best part about them is that they are not content with the six-player style of girl basketball play, but keep on an even plane with their brothers and play but five contestants. The rules that govern their games are the same that are in use in the Eastern

Last Monday night before a packed house the Daughters basketeers started off their second senson with a 56-6 score over the Exide girls. Imagine for yourself a girls basketball team making this number of points in a single game. It is not because the opposition was not very strong, but at the same time credit cannot be taken away from the winners.

Later in the week Steel Heddle was turned back by almost as large a count and last night was just a repetition of the previous pair of games.

All the home-team games of the team are played on Monday nights at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Thirty-eighth and Market streets.

It is team work that enables the Daughters to make such fine showings in the same stunt in the score over the Exide girls. Imagine their old rivals.
