THE HOME IN GOOD TASTE By Harold Donaldson Eberlein

Colonial Houses

The "Colonial house," whether of the type best known in New England, in the early Dutch house of New York or in the porticoed mansion of Virginia, is probably the favorite with most Americans, and it is indeed difficult to find a style of architecture bet-cult to find a style of architecture better suited to the needs of the usual American household.

The central hall, capable of being large or small, richly or very simply furnished, the rooms opening on either side, the dignity of the stairway with its landing and its beautifully designed rail, all have a strong appeal. Here is convenience, light, sultability. The rooms may be large, high, very dignified or may come near to the cottage type and be furnished with the utmost simplicity.

Any one planning to build a house should study deeply the kind of house which really appeals to him, or her. Such bits of history as we assimilate in the study will help to give color to the house and that "rightness" of argangement which comes from sympathy with the personalities which created the design of the house chosen.

Michigan University President May Take Newberry's Seat Lansing, Mich., Nov. 22.—(By A. P.)—The field in the race for the senatorial toga dropped by Truman H. Newberry appeared to be thinning out today, with three or four Republican leaders regarded as having drawn out in front, although Governor Aley I. Groesback still kept secret the identity of the person has tree recommend. of the person he was most earnestly considering to fill the place. The names most often heard now are those of Dr. Marion Le Rroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan: Dr. David Friday, nationally known economist, who is president of Michigan Agricultural College, and W. W. Potter, State fuel administrator.

Employing Bronze Ribbon for the Black Velvet Frock

By CORINNE LOWE

That it's a co-gent season is indi-cated by the high degree of favor ac-corded to cocon, coque and cocurde, Re-garding the last named, we do not seem able to recover from these plaited mo-tifs of ribbon which, introduced several years ago, were practiced so as-siduously on the summer frock. They are still exploited on some of the new-

We show the cocarde today carried out in bronze-plaited ribbon on a frock of black velvet. The motifs on the corsage are small in comparison with the two more mature specimens which punctuate the rippling side panels of the skirt.

The cocarde is of course, only one manifestation of ribbon popularity. Much of the ribbon and braid, too, now being used is metallic, and we find one of these trimmings the most frequent of the vevet frequent.
