Yesterday the entire undergraduate body marched to the stadium in the largest and noisiest parade which ever has had as its objective the idea to make the varsity eleven feel that the students are solidly behind it.

For more than half an hour the students sang and cheered while the three Harvard teams ran through kick-offs and plays for their entertainment, and if the undergraduate body is behind the team in half-hearted fashion there was no evidence of it.

One of the oldest of Yale's traditions was smashed last night, when President James Rowland Angell appeared at a football Yally to lend his support to the team that will face Harvard tomorrow. He was greeted by a roar of cheers from one of the largest rallies at Yale in recent years.

President Angell said that he knew he was breaking a tradition, but added that he did it because he wanted to pay his respects to a team "that took defeat as Yale men should." In discussing the work of the team President Angell said that he had noted to a friend Yale's apparent inability to negotiate the last few yards every time a touchdown was in sight. He added that the friend had suggested "Yale should shorten the field 10 yards and then try again."

Doug Crate, the former Camden High School athlete and a member of the Lafayette basketball team last winter, has a chance of starting the Lehigh game at left end in place of Milt O'Connell, the Easton lad, who has been a regular for two years. Schwab and Gazella Have Played in Three Games Against Lehigh

IN FOURTH GAME SATURDAY

Easton, Pa., Nov. 24. - Frank Dutch" Schwab and "Mike" Gazella wo of the stars on the Lafayette College football team, have unusual records in athletic contests with Lehigh University, Lafayette's natural rival in all branches of sport.

Schwab and Gazello are members of the senior class—the first full class to enter Lafayette after the World War and whose members have succeeded in restoring Lafayette at the top of intercollegiate athletics. Schwab and Gazella succeeded in winning varsity berths in their freshman year and. therefore, have achieved a fine record Saturday will mark the fourth time Schwab and Gazella have played foot-ball against Lehigh. The three games thus far have all ended in Lafayette triumphs, and another victory Satur-day will give Schwab and Gazella a mark that will probably never be equaled in future years, especially if Lafayette passes the one-year rule. In addition to taking part in three football victories over Lehigh, Gazel's has been an important factor in the by Lafayette baseball teams over Le-high. Gazella is regarded as one of the most finished infielders in college baseball, and in the course of his three years at Lafayette has received a number of offers from major-league clubs Gazella has taken part in every one of the eight baseball triumphs, so his record is eleven wins and no defeats. Schwab and Gazella are the only members of the football team who will graduate in June. But Saturday's came will mark the final home appearance of two other stars—"Dots" Brunner and Matt Brennan. Both Brunner and Brennan have played three years of football, so this will be their final game on March Field. The closing game of the year, with Georgetown, will be played December 2 at Washington.
