

WEATHER SINKING SPELL IN STOCKS

Measurements of Existing Situation Obtainable From Two Distinct Angles

New York, Nov. 25.—Today's stock market suffered another but sinking spell, which followed a mixed and congested, which carried before the decline was checked and prices of the active shares of both the industrial and railroad divisions of the market levelled under last night's closing level.

From the first angle, surface signs which seem to warrant a temporary shift to the other side of the ledger. There is no doubt the recent shake-down was effective in cleaning out many of the weak spots.
