When Cecii de Mille announced that he would give $1000 for an idea for a scenario that he could use he had no idea of the flood that would engulf him. He received over ten thousand manuscripts and found eight ideas which appealed to him strongly. So, instead of giving only one prize or splitting the prize, he has kept all eight and will give $1000 to each of the successful writers

I only wish that your inference were correct, that this were something that I could 'get out of my system' and then forget it:

"But I know that I shall never go."

Peter Pan writes: "I loved 'Peter Whiffle's' and 'Angela S.'s' letters. I hope they'll write often. "Whoosis fellow 'Redhead'? Talkacompany exercises its injunction to keep Valentino off the screen for two years, simply because it would be like going to a funeral or opening up an old wound, and I never do either of those things for pleasure.

Whoosis fellow 'Redhead'? Talkative chap! How perfectly ridiculous all this talk of the Valentino affair! I suppose it's the little boy look in his eyes or the exquisite tenderness of his love-making that gets them.

"But, speaking of screen lovers. I to see a De Rochefort picture if the

'I have a very soft spot in my heart for Rudy, but I don't think I have a soft spot in my heart in my he a soft spot in my head in regard to the subject. I can at least see clearly enough to realize that he is probably partly at fault in his present trouble. In any question of this kind there is usually wrong and right on both sides. And I devoutly hope that thousands of American women are not writing to him in such a way as to add fuel to the fire of bitterness and misunderstanding.

The Eternal Flame' was all that your write-up on Tuesday said it was.

"Would you advise me to try for the turquoise velvet, grape-bedecked evening gown by writing of Mae Mur-

"The whole tragedy might have been averted had his employers had the fineness of feeling, the human insight and the professional consideration that would have prevented them from treating a sensitive, high-strung, refined Italian like a 'Dago'; or had he possessed cool, calm, Anglo-Saxon judgment.

"It is maddening just to have to sit back so helplessly, unable to do uny-thing to avert what to many of us will be a great personal loss.

"Isn't it strange how some of us older women really feel toward Valentino? But I think his new wife understands the psychology of the situation when she says that all women love the man that appeals to their maternal instinct, and that Rudy instinctively does this, for he is fundamentally just a hig hoy.

"For the fans who have been aska big boy.

'For the fans who have been asking for Valentino's address, be can of course, be reached by mail through the office of his attorney, Arthur Butler Graham, 25 West Forty-third street, New York City. Do you think it unwise to give that address?"

(Yes, it's very unwise; that's why I'm giving it.)

Gentle Julia writes: "I had sworn off. I was going to save my stamp money toward buying Christmas pres-ents for my rich relations, but the letters from sorrowing sisters were too much for me. Not see him for two years! I shall have faded away like the dew of the morning—or doesn't dew fade? You see how it is—those letters from those heart-broken ladies—I don't even know whether dew fades.

'Two years is a long time to look forward to, unhappy sisters, but think how much better than if he was gone forever and never more should we be enthralled by his beautiful eyes and nice, shiny black hair and his ngility, etc.

"For, whether you like him or not. Mr. Neely, you must acknowledge that he displayed marked agility in some scenes in 'Blood and Sand.' Wally and his portrayal of 'Clarence' is truly a 'gem,' as you say. I certainly hope 'Noname' will see this particular picture and change his opinion regarding any one taking Wally's place.

"Who could-only the great John Barrymore? These two men head the ist of my favorites. "I think it is simply splendid so many fans have been so very enthusiastic about The Loves of Pharach, a very great picture, the greatest it has been iny good fortune to see. I could not imagine one's enjoyment complete in seeing this picture, however, without t fine orchestral accompaniment which means so much toward creating the proper atmosphere. Can you imagine the saxophone scene in 'Clarence' with-out a saxophone in the orchestra to give the desired effect?

"I was fortunate in hearing Charles Was fortunite in use of his music for the new picture 'Omar'—it is very beautiful and full of Oriental coloring. Can you tell me, please, when we are to have 'Omar'?

"Again, in admiration of "Clarence" it heads my list of the ten best of the American-made films. I did not miss Glenn Hunter in the part of Bobby, as Robert Agnew was so splendid and May McAvoy, I feel, is our best ingenue in the films, an adorable pair of youngsters.
