MAJOR C. J. BIDDLE ENGAGED TO WED

Noted War Ace Will Marry Mrs. Katharine Keep, Widow of Argonne Victim

DATE NOT ANNOUNCED

Cornell drew first blood in the spirited traditional battle with Penn on Franklin Field this afternoon. The off-tackle machine-like thrusts of the great Ithacan backfield carried the ball into Red and Blue territory, almost immediately, and Hanson, the sure-footed place kicker, booted it over the cross bar of the goal posts for 3 points.

The 55,000 spectators were amazed at the effectiveness of the Big Red team's straight football. But the Pennsylvania defense was tightening right along and the Cornellians had not found it possible to score a touchdown.

A break soon afterward gave the Quakers the pluck in Cornell territory, but they could do nothing worth while, and a fumble, a little later on, but the Ithacans on Quaker soil, when Hanson attempted another place kick and failed.

Cornell Gloomy Looking

At 1:00 the Cornell team, dressed for the fray, strode solemnly through the northeast gate and to their bench. They might have been marching to a funeral so deliberate was their step and so woebegone their expression.

At 1:15 the Cornell team, led by Hanson, who followed in their wake, had just finished his pre-game verbal attack.

For Ten Minutes Kaw and Pfann were piling on the catch kicks. Walter Whetstone, the former Radnor High School lad, doing the booting.

It was 1:22 when the Cornellians were marching slowly off the field, substituting for the usual cheering and shouting.

"It is going to be a bit rough on you students to play a hard game this afternoon," said the Ithacan coach. "We came here and we are going to a city that pretty much resembles tropical Florida," which, perhaps, is the reason why the Big Red team did as little perspiration-producing work as necessary in the preliminary drill.

Dinners Delay Spectators

Turkey dinners, which always seem more appropriate when held around the noon hour, must have delayed the major portion of the crowd. Graduate Manager Ernie Cozens said that every seat had been sold and that policemen, pressing side-line spectators and players would make a total of 55,000 watching the battle. Yet, at 1:30, when the Cornell band appeared at the northeast gate, the stadium was not nearly one-half filled.

The musicians from the college on Lake Cayuga wore red sweaters and white trousers and hats, and made a striking appearance. The Cornell color leader, as well as the band, and the noise started at once. Graduate Manager Berry, of Cornell, arrived in the press box about this time, and his comment

FARMERS GUESTS AT HUNT BREAKFAST BEFORE RACE MEET

Society Folk and Land Owners Mingled in Colorful Feast at Radnor Outing

OPEN HOUSE MARKS YEARLY THANKSGIVING DAY FETE

Children Are Present in Numbers as Thoroughbreds Strive for Cups

Farmers and gentlemen riders, society folk in drags and roadsters, "fiver" and shining sedan, red coats and "toppers" work horses with braided manes, and sleek thoroughbreds just back from the Royal Canadian Horse Show, combined in a colorful picture today at the annual Thanksgiving hunt, breakfast and races at the Radnor Hunt Club.

Each Thanksgiving Day the Radnor Hunt Club keeps open house, entertaining the farmers of Delaware, Chester and Montgomery Counties, owners whose lands the hunters urge horse and hounds after the fox on brisk winter mornings.

There were at least 500 present when the merry hunt club breakfast began at 9 o'clock in the clubhouse. After the breakfast the races were held in the adjoining estate of Lieutenant Colonel J. Martin Fadden.

There are some famous races run on Thanksgiving Day at the Radnor Hunt, races which are classics in the year's horse events. Principals of these are the Radnor Valley Farms' Challenge Cup race for a cup presented by Lieutenant Colonel McFadden, and the race for the Master's Cup, presented by S. Lawrence Bodine.

The judges, wearing regulation hunting garb of silk hat, red coat, white breeches and black riding boots, gave a touch of bright color to the scene. They included J. Stanley Howe, J. E. Leiper, Jr., William J. Clotier, John Strawbridge, Robert E. Strawbridge, Charles E. Martin, Robert L. Montgomery, Lieutenant Colonel McFadden, W. Hinkle Smith and W. Plunkett Stewart.

The course for the Challenge Cup was laid out over Colonel McFadden's estate. The conditions of the race are that it be ridden over a fair hunting country, with the ordinary hunting hazards, brush, streams and fences added to the difficulties of the course for today's race.

Entered in this and the Master's Cup race were some of the finest thoroughbreds in the vicinity, among them Red Wing, owned by Joseph N. Feringhetti; Huskin, owned by C. Mahlon Kline; Lakewood, owned by R. H. R. Toland; Bill Whaley, owned by Jacob E. Ridgeway; W. H. I. owned by Mr. Clotier; and Cocktail and Woburn, both owned by Mr. Toland.

Children at Hunt Breakfast

The most conspicuous figures at the hunt breakfast were children; every one who had them brought small sons and daughters along. Mr. and Mrs. David Sharp led their daughters Frances and Sidney with them, both dressed in heavy coats and caps of red wool.

MAJOR C. J. BIDDLE ENGAGED TO WED

Noted War Ace Will Marry Mrs. Katharine Keep, Widow of Argonne Victim

DATE NOT ANNOUNCED

Major Charles J. Biddle, Philadelphia lawyer and one of the most noted of American flying aces, will marry Mrs. Katharine Keep, of Chicago and New Orleans.

Mrs. Keep, an attractive young widow, was the wife of Henry R. Keep, who lost his life in the war. He was a commissioned officer and was killed during the Argonne fighting.

The engagement of Major Biddle and Mrs. Keep has not been announced officially, as her family is in mourning for the death of her father, James Le Genouez, of New Orleans, but most of the intimate friends of the Biddle family, which is widely known socially, have heard the news.

Mrs. Keep comes of a family of social distinction. A brother, Armand Le Genouez, a Princeton graduate, several years ago was a star football end, being given all-American rating for two seasons.

Major Biddle, who is associated with his father, Charles Biddle, in the practice of law, makes his home at Andalusia, Pa. King Albert of Belgium made him a chevalier of the Order of Leopold for his exploits during the war.

Major Biddle has been graduated from Princeton and the Harvard law school before the war. He joined the American aviation corps in March, 1917, and later entered the aviation school of the French army. He first was a member of Escadrille 74 of the French aviation force and then of the Lafayette Escadrille.

In the American service he was commander of the Thirtieth American Pursuit Squadron, and finally commander of the Fourth American Pursuit Group, consisting of four squadrons. He became an ace August 16, 1918, when he brought down his fifth enemy plane near Nancy. During his service he was credited officially with seven planes and unofficially with many more which fell within the German lines.

Major Biddle comes of a fighting family. In the war of the Revolution his great-granduncle, Captain Nicholas Biddle, lost his life in the blowing up of the Randolph. Another great-uncle, Commodore James Biddle, was famous for bravery during the war of 1812. A grandfather of Major Biddle was cited for gallantry in the Civil War.

Major Biddle is a grandson of the late Charles Biddle. He is a great-nephew of the late Judge Craig Biddle. He is a nephew of Dillon Biddle, Mrs. Stannard Hinde Thomas and A. Mercer Biddle, all of Torrington. Major Biddle's mother was Miss Letitia Glenn.

FAMILY FLEES FIRE MERCERSBURG STAR IN NIGHTCLOTHES WINS TITULAR RACE

Father Awakens Children as Billy Cox Leads Large Field in Flames Sweep Two Homes in American Interscholastic North Reese Street Championship Run

$150 IN MATTRESS SAVED STEPPACHER SURPRISES

Several persons were compelled to flee to the street in their night clothes shortly after 4 o'clock this morning when fire damaged the homes of James McGurr, 3029 North Reese street, and Jacob Nees, 3022 North Reese street.

The rescue by several bundles of $150 in notes which fell from a mattress tossed from the McGurr home was one of the incidents of the fire.

When occupants of the houses fled to the street they were wrapped in blankets and coats supplied by neighbors, who also aided in saving furniture.

The fire started in the home of McGurr, and spread quickly to the dwelling of Nees.

McGurr was awakened by clouds of smoke pouring into his bedroom from the hallway. He groped his way to rear rooms of the house and awakened his son, James, Jr., and daughter, Teresa, and fled to the street. McGurr, after throwing a mattress and several other articles out the window, quickly followed them.

Meanwhile one of the occupants of the adjoining house, who pushed to the street in his nightclothes, had tumbled in an alarm.

W. J. Cox, of Mercersburg Academy, won the annual American interscholastic cross-country championship run this morning over the titular course in Fairmount Park. In addition to winning the individual honors the Mercersburg School also succeeded in taking the team laurels, nosing out the Hutchinson High School, of Hutchinson, N. Y.

Cox dashed into the lead at the very start of the race, closely followed by Lewis of Buffalo High School; Shaw of Hutchinson High; Steppacher, of Northeast High; and O'Brien, of West Philly. At the fifteenth avenue bridge Lewis sputtered and drew up on even terms with the Mercersburg star. The two raced abreast for fifteen yards only to have Cox force slowly into the lead. He never faltered thereafter and crossed the goal fully 100 yards in the lead of Lewis.

GREEK KING HELD CAPTIVE; WANTED TO QUIT NATION

Kept Prisoner in Palace—Plea to Leave Country Is Refused

GEORGE TRIED TO SAVE FORMER CABINET CHIEFS

Britain Acted Alone in Withdrawing Minister From Athens, Bonar Law Says

THREE GENERALS ARRESTED

Condemned Hellenic Ex-Premiers Calm as They Faced Firing Squad

By Associated Press
 Paris, Nov. 30.—King George of Greece is virtually a prisoner in the palace, says a Belgrade dispatch to the Matin.

The correspondent asserts that the King made strenuous efforts to stop the execution of the former cabinet ministers and asked the Jugo-Slav and Rumanian Ministers to act in favor of the condemned men. As a result he found himself in conflict with the Gonatas Government.

After the executions the King expressed a desire to leave Greece, but his wishes were opposed by the Government, which took steps to prevent him from leaving the palace. He is only allowed to see persons in whom the cabinet has confidence, the dispatch adds.

Venizelos, former Greek Premier, is quoted by a special Lausanne correspondent as follows: "I deplore the tragic events that have taken place in Athens; however, they are essentially a matter of interior policy. Should Lord Curzon publicly stigmatize the Greek execution, the acts of Athens I should be under obligation to leave Lausanne."

London, Nov. 30.—(By A. P.)—Great Britain acted without consulting her allies in withdrawing her Minister from Athens after the executions of the former Greek high officials, Prime Minister Bonar Law informed the House of Commons today in answer to a question.

"Asked what steps Great Britain had taken to prevent the executions and why the Government had intervened, he replied:

"I stated yesterday that his Majesty's Government had urged the Greek Government not to permit execution of the former Ministers, and warned them to the practice of civilized governments to put to death outgoing Ministers on account of the failure of their policy."

This statement evoked loud laughter and cheers in which Mr. Lloyd George and the other Ministers in the late Government joined.

A Renter's dispatch from Athens says that General Panoulas, Doussinakis and Voulas have been arrested. General Doussinakis is one of the most prominent military figures in Greece. General Panoulas, also a former commander of the Greek Army, was reported last September to have joined the ranks of the revolutionaries. He has served as chief of the general staff and with the Greek military division at Constantinople, and last September was appointed commander-in-chief of the army in a last unsuccessful attempt to stem the tide of the Turkish advance.

Paris, Nov. 30.—(By A. P.)—The cabinet ministers executed here last Tuesday went courageously, even jauntily, to their death.

The 1625, Baltazis and General Hadjimichalis were the first to be executed. They had their places in the little line before the firing squads.

All removed their hats, except Gouras, who stood with his hands in his trousers.

Siratos solemnly lit a cigarette as he took his place, then he handed the lit cigarette to the officer in charge of the execution as a sign of his appreciation of the latter's courtesy and tact in the exercise of a painful duty.

Theodosis and Baltazis chatted gaily with the Greek military chief, General Panoulas, who was silent and General Hadjimichalis was usual air of nervousness and restlessness.

The death sentence was delivered by the court-martial on Tuesday, and was communicated to the condemned men, who had previously been removed from Averoff by a sign of execution near Ghoul, outside the limits of Athens.

Immediately at 11 o'clock, after the admission of the last religious rites, the prisoners were removed in automobiles to the place of execution near Ghoul, outside the limits of Athens.

The condemned were immaculately dressed and they showed no emotion as they alighted from the motors and walked to the square formed by the waiting troops. They took places at equal intervals, each man facing his own firing squad of twelve men, and refused to be blindfolded. When the firing squad was ordered to fire, they calmly and bravely met their death in each case had come instantly.
