There was a time when the question sex equality in business proved a born obstacle and when women of adeniable intelligence and ability exenced no little discouragement when referenced no little discouragement when they knocked at the portals of what was conceded to be man's domain. Their reception, if they did manage squeeze by, was not one that might remailed as overwhelmingly cordial bet smacked of a cool North wind. ## MINISTERS' WIVES WILLING TO STAY AWAY FROM CHOIRS

Cleric Husbands Defend Them Gallantly, but Women Admit Danger of Too Much Church Interference

Ministers' wives in Philadelphia do not need to be admonished to keep out of the choirs in their husband's churches. Almost in a single voice they agree that it makes for peace in the choir of it they keep strictly away from it. "It's a shame for the minister's wife to try to be the minister." commented to try to be the minister," commented

The remarks of Mrs. Woolston, the wife of the Rev. C. H. Woolston, "Better for her to stay away," sug-gester another. "There are ministers' wives and min-ister's wives," came the keen observa-tion of a third. The consensus was that the moment in minister's wife took prominent part in any one field of direct partsh work it haid her open to the accusation of try-

Inid her open to the accusation of trying to dominate. A pastor, it was felt, ought to be strong enough to direct the interferenties of parish without the interferenties of parish without the interferenties of the choir here ought to be of the unobtrusive, simple type, it was thought.
The discussion came on the heels of advice proferred the Presbyterian Ministers' Association by C. Harold Lowiden, choir leader of the Linden Bapatist Church, Camden, Keep wives out of the choir here suggested.
"I never encourage it," he added. "I know of one church where the pastor's wife taking part.
Mrs. Linn Bowman, wife of the Rev. Linan Bowman, wife of the Rev. The one called by his church, and it is he who must direct the spirituality of his flock. I do not believe in unconscerated choirs, anyway. I believe in the stary out of the choir.

GOING TO CHINA LATER

The new pastor's assistant of the Ninth Presbyterian Church believes that all of this talk about the younger generation going to rack and ruin is bosh. She pauses and leans reflectively back n her chair as she makes this remark. Her eyes are deeply blue. Her hair is blond, smartly but simply dressed. She is young enough to be accepting invitations to senior proms, pretty enough to steal anybody's partner. Yet there is that earnest expression. It is to be suspected Miss Mirlam Conrad, of Reading, who holds the distinction of just having been appointed pastor's assistant in a large West Phil-adelphia church, finds her work more zestful than half a dozen seniar proms restring together. She was graduated from Oberlin College four years ago. "I'm going to do everything but prench," she admitted today as she sat in her new home at 614 South Yewdall street, and discussed the work she has just taken up. "And if I was ever just taken up. "And if I was ever asked to do that, I think I'd be scared to death.

Likes Young People

"I believe it's a great mistake," she said, "for older people to throw up their hands in horror and call this a generation when boys and girls are generation when boys and girls are generation when boys and girls are is a little interest taken in them and they can give you far more than you can ever give them. I think young people are worderful. The trouble is people don't iadge them by the times in which they live, but by the times in which they live, but by the times of a half a generation ago. "Take jazz, for instance. Now, per-sonally, I think jaz zmusic is abomin-take the young people away from it. I believe in working at the cause and removing the jazz from where it is a temptation to them. One way of doing this is to crowd it out with plenty of woolesome good times."

Youth is going to be a plank in the platform of the Ninth Presbyterian Church if the new little pastor's as-Church if the new little paster's as-sistant is able to carry out her plans, and she believes she is, because she has an enthusiastic director in the person of Dr. William M.
