Insurance Presidents Told to Quit Bemoaning So-Called "Decadence"

DEMANDS MORE ACTIVE INTEREST IN ELECTIONS

Public Advised to Study More Deeply True Functions of Senate

New York, Dec. 8.—The United States Senate was defended against some of the criticism directed at it and held up as a proper subject of study by patriotic Americans in an address delivered by Senator Pepper...

Discussing ways of bridging "the gap" between a citizenship that is purely theoretical and that which is also practical, the Pennsylvania Senator declared much of the unsympathetic discussion of the Senate was due to "widespread ignorance among critics respecting what the Senate is and what it does."

Points to Filibustering On the other hand, it is hard to justify the extension of these principles to ordinary legislative business. A question of practical citizenship is whether Senate rules should be amended in their application to purely legislative business...

Would Arouse Presidents Senator Pepper urged the life insurance industry to "leave the easy chair" at the club, suit bemoaning the decadence of the Senate...
