

EMPTIES SHOTGUN AT ARSON SUSPECT

Chester County Farmer Wounds One of Three Men Fleeing From His Barn

STATE POLICE HUNT 'HARRY'

State policemen today are hunting for three men, one of them believed to have been wounded in a shotgun and revolver fight with Wilton Grammer, owner of a large farm in West Goshen Township, three miles north of West Chester. Grammer emptied his gun at the men when he found them fleeing from his barn and they disobeyed his order to halt. It is believed the men were planning to set the building afire.

Used Only Cartridge He Had

Grammer was handicapped by the fact he had only one cartridge in the shotgun. One of the men returned his fire with revolver bullets, but they went wild.

Bloodstains on a fence over which the men climbed and made their way to a nearby automobile indicate that one of them at least had been injured by the gunshot from Grammer's gun, and the State troopers are making inquiries at hospitals and other places where the wounded man might have been treated. Grammer went to his garage after supper to look after his motorcar, and heard whispered talking in the barn. Through a connecting door he saw three men hunting about the barn with the aid of a flashlight. Grammer left the garage quietly and ran to the house for his shotgun.

When he emerged he saw the shadows of the men outside of the barn. Rushing at them, he ordered hands up, and they ran. Grammer fired and says one cried out as though hit. Instantly one of them turned and fired four shots from a revolver at him, but missed. They dashed for the roadway, jumped a fence and gained their auto in which they sped away.

State Police Hunt for 'Harry'

Major Wilhelm, with his deputies, J. M. Morgan and Arthur H. Finley, went from West Chester to investigate. All that Grammer could tell them, aside from the story of the shooting, was that he heard one of the men called "Harry" by one of the others as they jumped the fence. He thought "Harry" was the one he shot.

Sending in false fire alarms has been a form of amusement indulged in by some one in Chester County since the barn burning began. Last night the troublemaker used a "party-line" telephone to send false alarms. The subscriber in the wrong used denied knowledge of the alarms.

Major Wilhelm said last night he was not ready to take a bold step, but he obtained in following various leads picked up in his investigation of the twenty-one fires in Chester, Delaware and Montgomery Counties. He said there was positive knowledge that twelve of the barn fires were not of incendiary origin. The others are being carefully sifted out and thus far, he said, the Fr. J. Blatz sponsor fire, at Malvern, is the only one through which he has any present hope of getting a clue.

REYBURN PORTRAIT DIM

To Be Retouched, as Will Others in Mayor's Reception Room

A portrait of former Mayor John E. Reyburn was found to be in need of retouching when it was taken from the wall of the Mayor's reception room this morning. The painting was taken down with the portraits of twenty-seven other former Mayors and the huge painting of William Penn, so that the room could be fitted with Christmas decorations.

The Reyburn portrait appeared affected by the wear and tear of years and the frame was slightly sprung. The collection of paintings will be placed in a City Hall storeroom and will be given needed repairs during the holidays. Harry T. Baxter, Chief of the Bureau of City Property, will arrange to have the Reyburn painting restored. It was done in 1912 by Albert Rosenthal at a cost of about $1000.
