CHAPTER IV
The Wind Bell

"I AM going to tell you how I saved [illegible] from the Hermit from robbers," [illegible] Raven, blinking [illegible] and then [illegible] parcels grouped [illegible]

[illegible] and near John the [illegible] he was a rich [illegible] Raven went on. [illegible] as poor as they [illegible] They would have [illegible] had they [illegible] supposed fairy who [illegible] gossip for the [illegible] brought food to [illegible] told the door-[illegible]

[illegible] folks who learned [illegible] Those [illegible] or the times [illegible] using his good [illegible] doing good deeds. [illegible] robbers and [illegible] to do bad deeds. [illegible] ones they watched [illegible] They saw him leave [illegible] food on door-[illegible]

[illegible] the robbers. "This [illegible] grow scarce. He [illegible] He is a miser [illegible] gold. We will [illegible] We will kill him [illegible] money." [illegible] the robbers' [illegible] word they [illegible] when they [illegible] No miser [illegible] he did. They [illegible] robbing like [illegible]

[illegible] wings would [illegible] ornament. But when [illegible] ripped off his [illegible] I could not [illegible]

wake him up. I rapped and I rapped, but no answer did I get except from a tinkling wind bell hanging above the porch.

"Tinkle, Tinkle, I have sung the Lesson to Sleep. He will not awaken until morning. Sing the wind bell slow."

"What should I do? A sharp puff of wind blew me from the window. I looked up. Blizzard Imps filled the sky. They were planning a rough game of tag. I thought of a way to save the hermit.

"Blizzard Imps, Blizzard Imps, you are soft and warm and slow. You can't catch me. The Blizzard Imps didn't like to be called soft and warm and slow. They started after me to show they were hard and cold and swift. I darted away to meet the robbers.

"The Blizzard Imps, chasing me, swirled around the robbers, whirling drifts about their legs, pelting them in the face with stinging bits of ice.

"Oh, we can see where we are going in this blizzard,' cried one of the robbers. 'We can't find the house of the hermit.'

"I listen to hear another robber. 'Do you hear a tinkling sound? That is the wind bell that hangs on the porch of the hermit's house. It will lead us where we want to go.'

"Sure enough, the tinkling of the wind bell sounded loud and clear. I would betray the hermit to these cruel foes.

"But no. That could not be. I darted away to the hermit's house. I snatched the wind bell from the nail where it hung. I carried it out into the storm. Tinkle! Tinkle! Tinkle!' the wind sang its song. The robbers followed the sound. They ran past the hermit's house. They fought their way on through the storm, led by the sound of the bell.

(The surprising place to which the bell leads the robbers is to be told in the next chapter.)
