

Are Modern Men Actually Reacting Against the Bondage of Marriage?

By WINNIFRED HARPER COOLEY

It used to be the wife who was understood. She was the one who... Men seem to be getting temperamental and feeling that they just cannot stand being married.

Men seem to be getting temperamental and feeling that they just cannot stand being married. It is not the woman who is understood... She was an organ, and a woman's theme.

THIS DAY AND YOU

By Ralph Waldo Trine, Author of "In Tune With the Infinite"

It sometimes happens that I don't see your good points. Now, then you are not so good. Look at you and you will find the very best in your human soul.

They were so wrapped up in their own conceits, their own self-interests, hence their own ignorance, that they had never found the God in their selves, and so they never dreamed that he was the real life of their suburban and slum.

In the degree that we hold a person in the thought of all or of a part of his good, and that we regard him as a person, and that we regard him as a person, and that we regard him as a person.

Can You Tell?

By E. J. and A. W. Bodner

Analysis and tests when their eyes are closed, the air about them is great that they must have special devices, beyond the electronic, to know from feeling to itself. Yes, that our ordinary conception that the sun goes off at least one ought to be familiar.

The City Apartment—Living Room

As the majority of the apartments have their living room and dining room opening out of one another, we must consider that they are in the same under consideration and give the same the benefit of the appearance of the dining room by papering from both sides, and painting the wood work the same color in both rooms.

A very heavy room could be worked out with a plinky buff paper and cream enamel paint. With this color could have a damask curtain in an richest material and repeat it also in the same material. A heavy drape could be covered in a gold and black-brocade, and one or more other drapes would harmonize well covered in a blue and gold damask.

Charity

The Reckless Age

By HAZEL DEAO BACHELOR

Alma Foster is a spoiled member of the younger set who thinks men are made for her amusement. She regards herself as Charley Tyme made for the sake of her enjoyment.

The reading of the script began and Alma realized that they were slowly approaching her end. She had been so used to being the center of attention that she could not bear to be anything but the center.

LOVE NOTS

By KAY KEAN

Beware the perfumery learning kiss! Like all garments of habit it is apt to become shabby. Less dangerous is the evening greeting kiss. Owing to a touch of absence it may be used without risk of leaving.

The Woman's Exchange

Peroxide and Ammonia. Dear Madam—I remember reading in your column some time ago about a liquid which bleached and in time deloused unshined hair. Could you give me the directions for making this liquid? As I remember it, one of the ingredients was peroxide, also could you tell me if this is at all harmful to the delicate scalp? How often should it be used and how soon may it be used after a depilatory powder? M.H.

The Bookmark

Dear Madam—What would you suggest as a novel idea in bookmarks to be given to the members of our Bible class? There are about twenty members in the class and I want to give them something for Christmas, while I don't want it to be anything expensive. Perhaps you know of something on which I might have their names engraved or stamped, if it is made of wood. M.M.

Things You'll Love to Make

There is a handsome runner of monk's cloth that you can make as a gift for a bride. Measure the length required in the runner, then allow two and a-half inches on each end for a margin fringe. Work a basket of lace in colored cross-stitch using silk or silk. The fringe is made as follows: Fray out each end four inches. Divide the strands into groups. Twist the first two groups tightly with your thumb and finger. Then twist the next two groups in the same direction. Hold them firmly and knot them together near the end. Continue with the next four groups and so on until all of the strands are knotted into fringe. FLORA.

Tomorrow—Telling the Family

At the end of the rehearsal Alma walked up to Hurlingham. Her face was very white and her eyes burned, but her mouth was steady. "Of course, you'll want to get some one else for the part," she said evenly. Hurlingham bent forward upon her. "What do you think?" "I don't think I was romantic," she answered quickly and in spite of the fact that she had not put upon herself her usual tremble.

In Spite of the Scarcity of Cake the Business Meeting Was a Success

The Crowd That Met to Talk Over Some Church Work Meant Business and a Petty Thing Like This Couldn't Affect Them

"OH, YOU just go for the cake. You won't get anything done." growled the scornful brother of a girl who was hurrying off to a meeting of her church organization. It was rather a conference of heads of such organizations from various churches. Brother was contemptuous just on general principles.

Being masculine, he was unable to imagine a feminine meeting as amounting to anything more than a lot of chattering females eating their heads off. I wonder what he thought when he came back and told him what had happened? For as it turned out, the girl who was to provide the cake to go with the hot chocolate, had left it in a closet in the parish house that afternoon, and when she tried to get it that evening the key wouldn't turn in the lock.

She struggled and hurt her hand trying to open the door, called in the sexton, who had the same kind of trouble with the thing, and still the door wouldn't open. They couldn't get any locksmiths or carpenters or whatever they needed at that time of day, and they didn't want to break in the door. The whole affair turned out beautifully, much business having been attended to, and the fact that there was not enough food added to the enjoyment instead of ruining the party.

Brothers don't always know about feminine business meetings. It was the splendid spirit in this meeting and the girls who ran it, which made it so successful. The girls didn't come to chatter or get the cake, they came for business. That attended to, they were perfectly delighted to be refreshed with food and drink. But the fact that this was short didn't spoil anybody's Christmas at all.
