$11,000,000 to Be Distributed to Relations After Wait of Twenty-four Years
LAST ACCOUNTING IS MADE

The first and final accounting in the $11,000,000 estate of Thomas McKean, who died twenty-four years ago, was completed yesterday by Judge Gest in the Orphan's Court.

The McKean estate was one of the largest ever administered in this city, and the accounting was a task of no small magnitude.

The original estate legacies of $1,000,000 and $275,000, paid to McKean's wife and children, were distributed in 1898.

The McKean estate was one of the largest ever administered in this city, and the accounting was a task of no small magnitude.

Then how can you say its nothing with one breath and hear it with the next. Willyum you'll haff to go down and scare them away, no, dont you dare, you stay rite heer do you heer? Dont get excited, I havent started to move yet, pop sed. Wich he hndent, and ma sed, Well you wouldnt calinly sit there and let berglers brako in as if they owned the house, would you?

Why not, If theres anything in this house worth stealing somebody must of brack it in since we went to bed, pop sed.

Wich jest then I remembered something, saying, G, I know, it aint walgore, its a stick I hung out of my window this afternoon on a string and it must be blowing against the side door on account of the wind. G, aint you blak it its not berglers? I sed.

Back to bed and tako this with you, pop sed. Meaning a farse slap some place he gave me jest then, feeling extor farse on account of me having on my thin pidjammers.
