T HAS been another week of much Miss Frances S. Hutchinson, before the Christmas meeting of the Saturday Evening Dancing Class.

THAS been another week of much entertaining. And next week, too, will be gay, not only for the out set, but for the school set as well. Last grening there was the dance at the Ritz-Carlton given by the Fitz-Eugene Newbold, whose wife was Miss Eleanon know Mrs. Ritchie was Miss Dorothy Newbold and is a sister of Gene Newbold, and his wife was Miss Eleanor Pepper, a daughter of Senator Pepper. The dance was given in the jur.ior ballroom and was a very smart affair. Some of the debutantes were invited, but it was not a "deb" dance and the guesis were mostly of the younger married set.

Whenever I see Mrs. Ritchie's name I think of the cunning book, "Advice to Will-lie Lebutantes," a satire of things social which Miss Molly Thayer wrote the year after her own debut and defleated to her cousin. Mrs. Ritchie, who was about to be introduced herself. It was perfectly killing the way she described the Assemblies, a formal dinner and a theatre party and advised the debutante how to act. That was Miss Thayer's first venture in the literary world. I think. She has published one or two other books since and has written a number of quite equisite little poems.

debutantes and older girls was done in the homes, and if you have noticed, as I have, that is the way the Montgom-erys have entertained all through the early season themselves. No large ball in a hotel, but a series of several dates, to which some 300 or 400 guests were invited, and all given at Ardrossan, their own home.

ONLY recently I had the pleasure of Oseing a frock which was worn by a debutante at her first Monday Evening in 1883. Mr. William White, known as "Dancing Willie White" because he conducted the class and was very fond of dancing himself, had succeeded Mrs. Beleen as a controller of the very fond of dancing nimself, had suc-creded Mrs. Boker as custodian of the dancing class then. Later Mrs. Boker. Mrs. John T. Lewis, Jr., and Mrs. Frederick T. Mason conducted the class again and finally Mrs. Frederick Thurston Mason took it over and kept Thurston Mason took it over and kept it until her husband's death, when she went into mourning, and the Monday Evening was abondoned.

The frock I speak of was of soft French muslin and had a full skirt, yellowed a bit by being laid away, trimmed about the hem with ruffles of the lates. The holder was much high. soft lace. The bodice was made high at the back and with elbow sleeves. while the front was cut in a square low neck, the whole edged with wide reffes of Valenciennes lace. ON THE other hand, never have women worn such exquisite colors and color combinations as they are now wearing. Have you by any chance seen that cont which Kay Dunn, the Edwards Dunn's daughter, is wearing? It's made from a wonderful shawl with Paisley design in reds and blues It's trimmed with sable and has wide sleeves edged with fur. She was wearing it the other day over a dark blue relvet frock which was very becoming. Kay is very fair, you know, and her lat was of blue felt and had a bunch of red currants on the right side.

THE Art Alliance will have an interesting reception next Thursday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock. We have been invited there to meet Annie Russell and her husband, Mr. Oswald Yorke.
