Nancy Wynne Goes to Mrs. Edward O. Shakespeare's Tea on Saturday—She Sees Some Attractive Costumes and Discusses More Parties

BY NOW the debutantes are in a regular "Christmas rush," with a big dance every night and teas almost a thing of the past.

However, on Saturday there was a most interesting tea at the Bellevue, though it was not strictly a debutante affair, as the guest of honor was Mrs. Edward O. Shakespeare, Jr., a June bride. There were plenty of debutantes there, though, as the card of Elizabeth Morgan, a popular deb, was included in the invitation. The tea was given by Mrs. Shakespeare, Sr., who is Elizabeth's aunt (both Mrs. Shakespeare and Mrs. Morgan having been Miss Baird).

Elizabeth looked very well in pink brocade. Young Mrs. Shakespeare, who was Miss Henrietta Wilson, also chose pink, which was most becoming to her blonde coloring. Her dress was of figured chiffon and was draped, and she wore a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Shakespeare looked handsome in a gown of black and white, which was trimmed with jet. She also wore orchids and lilies of the valley.

Since the end of October Ted Shakespeare and his bride have been living with his mother at the Wellington; before that they rented a house in Chestnut Hill, where they spent last summer.

THE streets and stores are just jammed these days and wherever you go you are bound to bump into dozens of people you know.

I saw Lillian Ferguson, or "Bitsy," as every one calls her, on Chestnut street one day last week looking very well in a rose-colored tulle suit with wide sleeves embroidered in gray and black wool and a small hat of black shiny satin which looked well with her curly yellow hair and blue eyes. Bitsy, who is the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Ferguson, of Chestnut Hill, is having an evening party this winter, but so are all the other deb; it certainly is a gay season.

THERE have been a great many big affairs all fall, but not many that have been called balls. Sometimes you hear that such and such a dance is to be a ball and then again that isn't, till you get homelessly confused, but I think I'm quite safe in saying that tonight's party is one. It is to be at the Ritz and is being given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jefferson, for Mr. Jefferson's new daughter, Marguerite Boyle, who is engaged to Logan Black.

Among those who will give dinners before the ball are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hage, Jr., who will entertain at the Ritz for Florence Crozer and Anne Townsend, who will entertain in honor of Elizabeth and Eleanor McCann, two friends of hers from Baltimore, who, I think, are also debs. Anne will also give a dinner on Thursday night for them and for two of her other friends, Helen Scott and Lucie Carnegie, of Boston, who expect to stay with her, for Thursday is the night, you remember, when about forty friends of Anne's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Townsend, will give a large dance for her, and from all that I hear it is going to be quite an unusual affair.

THEY gave Ellen some soup for lunch the other day when she came to visit at grandma's house. It was home-made soup, and somehow it hadn't turned out so well as usual. The crowd knew it as soon as they tasted the first spoonful, but they hoped Ellen's baby taste—she is only four—would miss it. Slowly, with the laborious method by which she manipulated her spoon, she lifted some of it to her small, pink mouth. Her face went blank with disappointment, but she didn't say anything. One more spoonful went carefully in, and then the spoon was laid neatly down. Ellen leaned back in her high chair and the manners which mother had so carefully taught her made their first spontaneous appearance.

She gave a regretful little sigh.
