

ONLY SIX G. O. P. VOTES WITH BORAH

Canvass of Senate Indicates Defeat of Economic Conference Proposal

PUBLIC DEMANDING ACTION

By CLYTON W. GILBERT Staff Correspondent Evening Public Ledger

Washington, Dec. 27.—The Administration Republicans think they have the votes to beat Senator Borah's proposal for an economic conference on European problems.

Thirty-two Republicans are expected to vote for the measure.

It is said that only six Republicans can be counted upon to vote with Mr. Borah.

On the other hand, some of the opponents of the economic conference may support the Borah proposal, if it is limited by restrictions. It is not clear that the Administration group will oppose the Borah resolution if amended.

It is said that the Administration group will support the conference if it is limited by restrictions.

Test to Come on Point of Order

The issue will come to a test when a point of order is made against Mr. Borah's resolution that it is not pertinent to an appropriation bill and this is expected to rule the solution of the point of order.

Mr. Borah's friends believe that there are twelve Republicans who will vote with him and that the Democrats will vote with him.

Public Sentiment Demanding Change

In the opinion of the leaders, the factors and of business men generally the economic policy adopted in the Longueville bill is a business settlement of the economic policy.

What the Senate is doing today is debating whether they should give a reconsideration and vote for it should be.

Reverse of Policy Implied

The weakness of Mr. Borah's proposal is that it is a reversal of the economic policy of the Senate's position toward world relations.

On the other hand, the Administration is working to get the economic policy of the Senate's position toward world relations.

McKoin Gets Writ of Habeas Corpus

Before the physician had an opportunity to reply to Justice Stanford, the court held the physician for a further hearing at 9 A. M. on January 8.

McKoin made no statement and smiled pleasantly at Justice Stanford as he was led from the courtroom by the detectives.

The accused physician, while angry at his arrest, is inclined to treat the matter lightly.

When the time comes I will show you, was his quick reply.

At one time I was willing to go and see the doctor, but I was not about to go to the hospital.

THE MOVIE FAN'S LETTERBOX

By HENRY M. NEELY

Hessie G.—Some time ago you wrote me telling me of your admiration for Rodolph Valentino, and I answered you advising you not to let any one actor absorb your whole attention.

I have had your name and address, and I advise you to come in to my office and see me some morning between 10:30 and 12, or else send me your address at once. I can assure you that you will be very glad of it.

Defender writes—I would like to write in defense of the play "The Young Rajah." You have said very little about it, but you have been so much to the point that I think all the fans realize, as I do, that you have done it.

To me it is just a beautiful fairy story for grown-ups. Perhaps you never read for fairy tales when a child, for I believe only those who did like them would enjoy this play.

It is a beautiful story, and to me this story is just like those wonderful old tales where the princess is always beautiful and good, the prince is always handsome and brave, and the wicked stepmother takes place as a matter of course, and where jewels are as plentiful as when Sindbad picked his bags of diamonds off the ground in the valley of the Arabian Nights.

I do not profess to know anything about Wallie's private life, but I do feel that any one who has a frank open face like his does not reflect sensually, and I am quite ready to believe, until some one can prove to the contrary, that the cause of Wallie's present condition is nothing more than his good nature being imposed upon. I pity him from the bottom of my heart.

By all means let us stick by him, and let our sympathy and understanding show him that there are a few of us still think well of him, in adversity, even as we did when he was in the height of his popularity. It will prove to him that at least our good regard was genuine.

I am perfectly willing to let you know the trend of fan opinion about Wallie. So far, there has not been

The Praeger Gentleman writes: "If there is any American author whose work must be transferred to the screen intelligently, it is Joseph Hergesheimer. The casting of Richard Barthelmess in the character of Charles Alcott in the screen version of "The Bright Shovel" seems to me a very happy choice.

This Barthelmess has proved himself to be a splendid fellow, both in his choice of roles and portrayals of characters. He shows admirably suited to convey the Hergesheimer spirit, as an actor, as a psychologist, as a life-size character, as a psychological personality, or as a character, life distorted or ennobled by the distortion or enrichment of a specific personality.

Barthelmess is essentially a mentalist of blind ideals and sublimated passion. The role calls for an artist of Barthelmess' powers, and I believe that we shall have no reason to fear a lack of brilliancy in his characterization. All fans center in the possibility that the actor may lack an ordinary sense of common sense.
