J. P. Harris,

In the meanwhile the Pennsylvanians remained in the cars at the Baltimore Depot, awaiting transportation through the city .-This soon became impossible on account of the excitement, and the placing other obstructions on the road. General Small then made every effort to have the troops sent back out of the city, beyond the reach of danger, as his men were entirely unarmed. The confusion which prevailed prevented as prompt action as was necessary, and before the cars could be removed, they were assailby the mob returning from the conflict with the Massachusetts troops. The windows of the cars were broken by the missels thrown in, and a number of the men injured.

The Pennsylvanians behaved gallantly, and many of them sprang from the cars upon their assailants, and engaged in a hand to hand conflict with them. It was impossible, however, to distinguish friends from foes, as the mob was composed of Union men and secesionists, who were fighting among themselves, and the Pennsylvanians, not being uniformed, could not be distinguished from either.

This state of things continued more than two hours, when Marshal Kane, Chief of Police, of Baltimore, appeared upon the ground, restored something like order, and placed the Pennsylvanians in cars ready to be returned to the North. The officers and men from Pennsylvania conducted themselves during the whole of these trying and perilous times with the utmost courage and deliberation. Regular troops could not have behaved better.

During the excitement, and while he was making arrangements to have the troops sent back, Gen. Small was cut off from any communication with his command by the mob, who made an attack upon the depot as he was coming out of it. He was pointed out as one of the soldiers, and came nearly falling into the hands of the mob, when he cooly turned the tide in another direction by appearing to be engaged in looking at some goods at the depot.

Myers, one of the officers, was knocked down and his sword taken from him, and he was stabbed several times in the side. Lieut. Col. Schoenleber was cut badly

his thumb nearly cut off. James Daugherty, of Company A. had his arm broken.

The main body came back last night, reaching Broad and Prime streets about

The following order was issued last night by Mr. Goodfellow, Acting Adjutant of the Washington Brigade, after his return to the "Officers commanding companies will report the list of killed, wounded or missing in the attack attak at Baltimore, this morning at 10 o'clock, at the Montgomery Hotel. At 12 o'clock officers will report at the same place the number of men ready for equipments and marching."

A German, it was said, died on his way up from Baltimore from injuries received. A number of men were bruised by stones and other missels thrown at them; but a full list cannot be obtained until the report is made this morning.

Sergeant Boland of the Frankford Guard. who was reported killed, turned up this morning unburt. We have been unable to learn how he got back to Philadelphia, which he reached this morning. Lieutenant Gritt, who was left at Havre de Grace, to look up stragglers, telegraphed that five had turned up at that point.

Captain Ritman, of the Frankfort Guard, tells us to-day that he feels confident that Linnaeus R. Jennings, a member of the company, is killed. He was last seen in a desperate conflict with the Baltimore mob.

We have it upon the authority of Captain E. W. Power, of the Buena Vista Guard, that when the dead body of a Philadelphia volunteer, who had been killed, had been put in a car by his comrades, the mob seizeed the corpse and kicked it about in the street until they actually kicked the jaw off.

The following telegraphic correspondence was had between the Mayors of the cities of Baltimore and Boston, immediately after

Hon. John A. Andrew, Governor of Mass. Sin:—No one deplores the sad event of yesterday, in this city, more deeply than myself; but they were inevitable. Our people viewed the passage of armed troops to another State through our streets, as an invasion of our soil, and could not be restrained. The authorities exerted themselves to the best of their ability, but with only partial success. Gov. Hicks was present and con-curs in all my views. As to the proceedings now necessary for our protection. When are these scenes to cease? Are we to have a war of sctions? God forbid. The bodies of the Massachusetts soldiers could not be sent out to Boston as you requested, as all communication between this city and Philadelphia by railroad, and with Boston by steamers, has ceased; but have been placed, ed in cemented coffins, and will be placed, with proper funeral ceremonies, in the mau-soleum of the Green Mount Cemeterry, where they shall be retained until further directions are received from you. The wounded are tenderly cared for. I appreciate your offer, but Baltimore will claim it as her right to pay all expenses incurred.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, George M. Brown, Mayor of Baltimore.

To this the following reply was returned by the Governor: To his Honor, Geo. M. Brown, Mayor of
