THE COUNTY FAIR.

LET the heart of every freeman In the Keystone proudly beat That the farmers and mechanics At the fair together meet, To exhibit rare productions From the rich and fertile land And the implements of labor. From the shrewd inventor's hand. Famous fire subsiding engines Moved by steam will there be found, And the only "squirts" and "suckers" That will be upon the ground. But unlike the human suckers Who are loafing day by day, They will work to aid the public And be useful when they play. From the hands of skilled mechanics, From the tillers of the soil, We shall see the fruits of labor As an earnest of their toil,

And shall see in competition Horses, oxen, sheep, and cows, Patent mowers, patent reapers, Patent rakes, and patent ploughs; Corn and wheat, with rye and barley, And the oats with beans and peas, Tempting piles of golden butter, And delicious looking cheese; Shanghai hens and Cochin Chinas, Little pigs and mammoth swine, Ducks and drakes, with geese and ganders, And the strutting turkey fine. There are fruits of all descriptions, With the vegetables rare, And a host of things unmentioned, Which will grace the present fair, Making Centre county foremost In the country's onward march, And most worthy as in the Keystone In the Union's sacred Arch.

NOTE.—All who make the Fair a visit
