Senator Bayard at Home.

the Cincinnati Enquirer.

In his family Senator Bayard is the model husband and the model father. His wife and children are his jewels, and he cherishes them with a true father's love and care. His family are his companions, and when he is not engaged in his public duties at the Capitol you are almost sure to find him with his family at home. The Bayards live very unpretentious-ly at Washington, in a plain brick mansion, large and roomy. The house is furnished with a view to the comof the inmates rather than as an exhibition of the wealth of its owner, ad therein it differs from the homes most wealthy men in Washington. engravings and paintings upon walls are rare rather than numerthe furniture is comfortable and tic rather than fashionable and y-five degrees, deeply covered with zen snow, lay the spot they desired reach, while to go round by trail fifteen miles. The miner took a pan, used for washing gold, spread blanket over it, got in himself, in of the pan melted from friction, blanket on fire, and it was his imther with all his traps."

A Rumor About Dr. Tait.

From the Manchester Examiner.

Churchmen and surprised everybody, was published the other day in one of the journals to the effect that the nation of the white men employed there. The firm say they are set at marry again. Mrs. Tait has been dead less than two years, and Dr. Tait work which white men will not do. The employes tell a different story, is on the verge of 70; yet the story did not seem impossible. Such things have happened. Readers, however, who have felt the pathos of that remarkable book which reveals to us so much of Dr. Tait's past married life will feel no little relief when they hear that the story is a foolish invention. The Archbishop has at last begged his private secretary to contradict it. None of the Archbishop's friends, he says, could for a moment have believed amount to anything is not certain, ed the story. There is, of course, no though it appears that there is an inmoral reason why a septuagenarian archbishop should not marry again, and the ecclesiastical reason is of very doubtful force; but it pleases one to believe that so good a man is faithful to the loving memory of so good a Realism on the Stage.

A real mule was one of the attractions recently in the play of "The Forty Thieves" as produced in Nevada City. The result is described by the Chronicle as follows: "No sooner had Ali come out of the cave with his bags of wealth and attempted to put them on the back of the beast than he began his part of the performance. He let fly with his heels, kicked the shavings (the supposed riches) out of the bags, kicked down the cavern, kicked duatting position on his haunches, and other traps over his head got one of his companions to give a push. He informed me he went at the speed of sixty miles a in the pit of his stomach. A rope was at the foot of the mountain.
