MAHONE'S EDUCATIONAL POLICY, Republican party by their alliance with the Repudiators, and the sympathy and aid accorded them by the administration and the Republican press everywhere, is very forcibly illustrated by an article in the New York World, from which we give the subjoined extract. The political mountebank, who fathers the dishonest methods alluded to, appeared in New York last week. to solicit funds for carrying on the repudiating campaign in Virginia, and was received and applauded by the Union League, at the head of which stands Judge Noah Davis: stands Judge Noah Davis:

"The effect of Senator Mahon's educational measure called the Riddleberger bill will be to ruin every college in Virginia. Many years ago these colleges invested their funds in Virginia State securities. Washington and Lee university took $91,768.27 worth of bonds yielding $5,505.48 annual interest. Senator Mahone, with the indorsement of Judge Davis, proposes to force the colator Mahone, with the indorsement of Judge Davis, proposes to force the college to accept in full satisfaction of this debt $40,781.44, yielding at the most $1,200 a year interest. Hampden Sidney college holds $70,50 worth of bonds, which Senator Mahone graciously offers to "readjust" into $31,356. To Randolph Macon college he handers $8,760 in the lieu of $19,708. To Richmond college $29,344.80 instead of $44,017.19. To the Blacksburg agricultural and mechanical college $182,507 instead of $344,313—being a loss of $161,743 to be inflicted on an institution especially designed for the benefit of the farmers of Virginia. To the Hampton normal designed for the benefit of the farmers of Virginia. To the Hampton normal colored school, established to educate the "poor and lowly" Africans of Virginia, he offers $91,285 instead of $172,156. This gives us within a fraction of bonds purchased in part with the money of testators bent on serving the process of Virginia and in part with the pecpis of Virginia and in part with the results of a close management of earn-ings, but in all cases purchased in a firm reliance on the public honor and honesty of the Old Dominion, at which Senator Mahone last night sneered, amid the applause of the Union League club of New York, as a thing of little consequence in comparison with the control by Republican placemen of the federal spoils. The Assassin.

The plea of insanity is to be set up The plea of insanity is to be set up and relied upon for the defence in the case of Guiteau for the murder of the President. His own narrative, carefully written, shows a deliberation and motive for the act, which will no doubt be a fruitful subject of argument on both sides. Guiteau gives the conception of the idea as follows:

"Mr. Conkling resigned on Monday, May 16, 1881. On the following Wednesday I was in bed. I think I retired about 8 o'clock. I felt depressed and perplexed on account of the political situation and I retired much earlier than usual. I felt wearied in mind and body, and I was in my bed about nine o'clock and I was thinking over the political situation and the idea flashed Howgate's Case.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Considering that Captain Howgate is supposed to have embezzled government funds to the amount of a hundred thousand dollars or so, and that he has manifested a not unnatural disposition to get away, the public will scarcely share the opinion of his counsel that the requirement of ten thousand dollars bail is unreasonable and oppressive. There is no occasion for sand dollars ball is unreasonable and oppressive. There is no occasion for any vindictive treatment of Howgate, and there is little danger of it. Indeed, the only danger is that his case will be allowed to drag along until the good effect that might result from his prompt prosecution will be lost. Yet, after all, even the most exemplary punishment of this pretentious swindler will scarcely make atonement for the will scarcely make atonement for the criminal carelessness that allowed him for so long the unrestricted control of the Signal Service funds at a time when his immoral and extravagant mode of life was notorious to all Washington. The story of Howgate's personal intri-gues has been often repeated with quite as much detail as necessary, but the manner in which he maintained his official position and influence has never been clearly explained and it is difficult to understand how a subordinate officer could have blossomed out into such magnificence of vice without the know! edge of his superiors.

Howgate is one of a class common enough in public life, who make up in effrontery what they otherwise lack, and with the slightest of proper quali-MAHONE'S EDUCATIONAL POLICY, fications impose themselves on the public as eminent men with such easy success that they do not even find it necessary to conceal their extravagance of life. There are multitudes of just such men not only in Washington but in every one of our cities. They occupy more or less prominent positions, with small salaries or perhaps with no salary at all; yet they wear diamonds and drive fast horses and drink the costliest wines, and an easy going public bows before them and allows them to select its officers and to handle its money. Occasionally there comes an unlooked for change of administration and one of these men is tripped up and goes to jail; but the game is not stopped be cause one player has dropped out.

cause one player has dropped out.

Howgate's case is peculiar only because he was in the military service, where we commonly expect—for what reason it would puzzle us to explain—to find a sterner virtue than in civil life. Otherwise he was an adventurer of the common sort. He pretended to be a scientific man, and the public took him at his own valuation and gave him preminence over the hard-working men of science who knew the hollowness of his pretensions but modestly held their tongues. The worthiessness of his character must have been equally well known to those about him, but he knew the way to influence and favor, and it was not till his mode of life became an open scandal in the newscame an open scandal in the newspapers that it seems to have occurred to anybody that his official conduct was probably no better. How many Howgates are there at Washington and elsewhere who have not yet been exposed? This is a question of deeper interest than the precise extent of this man's embezzlement or the proper amount of his bail. A rogue of this stamp is not an isolated phenomenon. He is the product of his surroundings, and that which produces one such is likely to produce more.

The Standard Monopoly.

rom the Harrisburg Patriot. Not until quite recently have the Not until quite recently have the owners of the gigantics Standard Oil monopoly undertaken to interfere in the politics of Pennsylvania. Formerly they were content to exert their power in the legislature to defeat laws for the protection of the oil producers and consumers of the State against their exactions and oppressions. As long as they could use the Pennsylvania Senate to prevent the passage of free Senate to prevent the passage of free pipe bills and other measures to break down their absolute control of the transportation of the oil as it issues from the ground and of the price to consumers the Standard monopoly were seek to extend their influences over a statuation and I retired much earlier than usual. I felt wearied in mind and body, and I was in my bed about nine o'clock and I was thinking over the political situation and the idea flashed through my brain that if the President was out of the way everything would go better. At first this was a mere impression. It startled me, but the next morning it came to me with renewed force and I began to read the papers with my eye on the possibility that the President would have to go, and the more I saw the complication of public affairs, the more was impressed with the necessity of removing him. This thing continued for about two weeks. I kept reading the papers and kept being impressed, and the idea kept bearing and bearing and bearing and bearing and bearing of the more I saw the complication of public affairs, the more was impressed with the necessity of removing him. This thing continued for about two weeks. I kept reading the papers and kept being impressed, and the idea kept bearing and bearing down upon me that the only way to unite the two factions of the Republican party and save the Republic from going into the hands of the rebels and Democrats was to quietly remove the President."

Having at the end of two weeks made up his mind to do the deed he began to prepare himself. He sent to Boxton for a copy of his book, "The truth," and began to dop the president was to discuss the president was to the control over one of the papers and kept being impressed, and the president was to the president was to the president was to the president was article in which they deal, they control article in which they deal, they control the entire productive supply. As the recent address of the Tammany Hall Democrats of New York declares, "It controls the pipe lines that carry the native oil as it issues from the soil, it monopolizes the iron tanks in which it is transported over the rail, it dictates the price to be charged on the clarified product as it comes from the refinery,

and in fact even the corner groceryman who deals it out in small quantities to who deals it out in small quantities to the consumer is forced by this monopo-ly to sell at a stated price, under penal-ty of a withdrawal of the product."

A few years ago when the combina-tion which has since developed into tion which has since developed into this great Standard monopoly was making its feeble beginnings its power could have been effectually curbed by the passage of a free pipe law. A measure so simple and just, and so completely within the law-making power of the State would have made the trade free in a great Pennsylvania product. Sessesion after session the oil producers in a great Pennsylvania product. Ses-sesion after session the oil producers sent representatives to the legislature demanding the passage of such a bill. It more than once passed the House, but was always successfully resisted in the Senate. Not only was the free pipe bill defeated but its most earnest advocates, Dill and Fertig, were defeated at the bailot box by a people partial against bill and rerig, were deleated at the ballot box by a people partial against themselves. These considerations have encouraged the Standard monopoly to take a still hold of the policies of the State which they have so ruthlessly plundered, and they are now turning their attention to the defeat of Orange Noble for State Treasurer. Noble for State Treasurer.

Another Indian Fight.

THE SCENE WITNESSED BY PASSENGERS ON A

TRAIN IN ARIZONA. SANTA FE, N. M., October 9.—A special to the New Mexican from El Pasosays: "Passengers via the Southern Pacific Railroad report that on Thursday night when their train was passing Willcox, Arizona, a fight was in progress be-tween citizens and Indians. The In-dians seemed to have made an attack on the whites, who were thrown into great confusion and were retreating. The firing of guns, which was fierce and constant, drowned the noise of the railroad train and was heard for a number of miles. The bodies of five line re airers were seen near the track, shot pairers were seen near the track, snot through the head. This is the second party of telegraph men murdered in the last few days." Nothing has been received confirmatory of the above at the district headquarters here.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 8 .- A Tucson dispatch says a Mexican family, resi-dents of Tucson, who had been on a visit to Sonora, were returning to this visit to Sondra, were returning to this place, and, when between San Ignacio and Ferrante, were overtaken by In-dians and Ignacio Valenzueda and his wife, Felicita Garcia, were killed. A four-year-old boy, named Jose Alvarco, who was with them, was wounded. A party of armed citizens left last night for the scene of the outrage.

A dispatch from Tucson gives the following special from Camp Grant:

"The wires are down between this property of the control of the control place and Thomas. It is supposed they have been cut by Indians. Signal fires have been seen in the Galiuro and Gra-ham Mountains. Lieutenant Wilcox and escort, supposed to have left Thomas this morning for this point, have not arrived yet. Some fears are entertained for their safety."

A dispatch from Fert Willcox, dated

October 8, says : A courier who has arrived at Bowie reports that Arnold's mmand attacked the Indians between Badacolarie Rancho and the Huachuca Mountains. The Indians abandoned all their animals and took to the moun tains. Two Indians were found dead. The rest have gone to the south end of the Huachuca Mountains.
