The Yorktown Celebration.

The Yorktown Centennial Celebration, in commemoration of the surrender of the army of Lord Cornwallis to the forces under Washington and Lafayette, was celebrated last week with imposing and appropriate ceremonies. The corner stone of the proposed monument which is to mark the glorious event which occurred there one hundred years ago, and assurred the independence of the United States, was laid in the presence of an immense throng, on Tuesday the 18th. The celebration practically closed on Thursday with a grand review of the troops present, about 10,000 in number from the original thirteen States, with detachments from the army and navy, all under the command of Maj. Gen. Hancock. Hancock was the "observed of all observers" and was received with the most enthusiastic demonstrations of favor wherever seen. The celebration was attended by President Arthur and cabinet, the Governors of of the various States and by representatives of the French and German heroes who took part in our revolutionary struggle, including descendents of the families of Lafayette and "With the break of day all was life and activity in the harbor, each ship sending forth its contingent of troops, marines or spectators to participate in the events of the day. The soldiers were called out at 7 o'clock, and after having breakfasted were formed in line, drilled and marched about prior to taking part in the review. The President and his Cabinet, Gen.

Sherman and staff, and the distinguish-ed French and German guests were in the seats allotted to them on the grand stand in good time. There was some delay in consequence of the non-arrival densy in connecticut troops; but Gen. Hancock, after waiting half an hour after the regular time for all delinquents to appear, finally concluded to start the

This afternoon the naval review took place under the direction of Rear Admiral Wyman. It was an interesting event. Tho manœuvre were similar to those usually presented at ordinary reviews. The President and his party left here for home to night, and though many persons still linger hereabouts, the cele-bration is practically over.

The Politics in the Case.

WHAT MR. SCOVILLE WANTS TO SHOW AT GUITEAU'S TRIAL.

the Washington Post.

"There is more of politics in the case thap most people imagine," said Mr. Secville, the counsel of Guiteau, to a Post reporter who asked him for the latest prove last sight. latest news last night. "What have you done toward getting

"What have you done toward getting legal aid ?" "I am not doing anything in the matter, but receive letters from all parts of the country proffering it. I have one offer from a gentleman who has been prosecuting officer in one of the South-ern States for fifteen years. But I want some one acquainted with District law and procedure. The political status of my associate is also important." "How does that enter into the case?"

"Well, I intend that everything con-nected with the crime shall be devel-oped, and if I should have a Stalwart to help me he might ant sponise this course. If it is necessary is all not hesitate to If it is necessary in the state to bring out the connection of Conking with the inception of the crime. The Stalwart schism was responsible for the matter, and the blame shall be placed where it belongs if I can secure that result.'

"How far have you got in the matter of obtaining associate counsel ?" "The man is selected and is willing to serve, but there is a hitch somewhere Other parties, perhaps his client, object to the assignment, and the court to day took the whole matter under advisement.

"Who is the man ?"

"That I cannot tell you at present, but he is a Democrat. His name was suggested to me as a good man." Hon. Richard T. Merrick, of the Dis trict bar, yesterday made a statement as to his present and possible future connection with the trial of Guitean. He said that when Mr. Scoville request ed him to take charge of the case he declined, owing to the prior claims of his professional engagements. In his interviews with Mr. Scoville he express-ed his opinion that the Criminal Court was without jurisdiction to try Guiteau on the charge of murder, and added that if the court should request him, as an amicus curia, to argue that ques-tion he would do so, but would confine himself to that question alone. The Circuit Court of this District on two different occasions, and in similar cases, has decided that it was without jurishas decided that it was without juris diction. It would be less discreditable to the country, he said, for the people to have lyncheid Guiteau than for the court to lynch him. The people migh have been excused had they, in the passion of the first moment of his crime seized him and torn him to pieces; bu since the accused has been given over to the judicial authorities to be tried, he is entitled to a fair and impartial trial, according to law. Mr. Merrick also re-marked that he could not see how Judge Cox, as it had been stated he intended to do, could have the question of jurisdiction disposed of before the trial of the case commences, for, said trial of the case commences, for, said Steuben. The following account of the grand review is from the letter of the Washington Post, dated the 20th instant:

made." As to me connection with the case, it would only be in the possible contingency previously mentioned. Shortly after Justice Cox came on the bench, in the Criminal Court yesterday morning, Mr. George Scoville, who had been sitting at the attorney's table waitbeen sitting at the attorney's table wait-ing for the court to open, went up and presented the court with a copy of his brief, which had been gotten up in pamphlet form. He sat and conversed with the Judge for a short time and then the District Attorney was called into the interview. After a few min-utes consultation the lawyers departed, and it is understood that his Honor and it is understood that his Honor will amounce his decision this morning in regard to the summoning of witness-es for the defense and their being paid by the Government, and also designate two members of the bar to assist Mr. Scoville in conducting the defense.

In the meantime the war ships in the harbor were firing salutes, and the bat-teries at the camp added to the thun-der. When the crowd was assembled along the route over which the proces-sion was to pass the scene was one of the greatest animation. The day was bright and fair and aided materially in showing the troops to good advantage. Shortly after 10 o'clock the strains of showing the troops to good advantage. Shortly after 10 o'clock the strains of martial music gave notice to the assem-blage of the coming of the procession. The route over which the procession was to pass lay along the borders of the Temple farm, and was a circuit of about four miles. Gen. Hancock, on horse-back, headed the procession. His com-ing was generally hailed with enthusi-astic cheers, and when himself and ing was generally halled with enthusi-astic cheers, and when himself and staff reached the grand stand the ap-plause was deafening. Gen. Hancock and staff fell out of the line and, dis mounting, took seats on the grand stand, when that structure was reached, and residued the troops as they passed and reviewed the troops as they passed.

After the review the Connecticut reg-iment marched at once to the boat and left for Charleston, S. C., where they will be the guests of the Washington Light Infantry of that city. The latter command left on the boat for home immediately afterward. The Georgia and Rhode Island troops left for home this aftermoon also. this afternoon also.

Gen. Hancock stated to the President that there were 9,500 men in line. The president was quite enthusiastic over the magnificence of the display. The only colored troops in line were two apart of the First Virginia Regiment, they were loadly cheered by the spec-tors from the North. At 2 o'clock this afternoon Gov. Cor-nell entertained the President and the same time Gen. Hancock gave a dinner to the Army and Navy officers and the others of the volunteer commands. Both were largely attended and were affairs of great brilliancy. Gen. Hancock stated to the President

Prom the New York Times. LONDON, October 6.—It is just a quar-ter of a century ago this month that the Queen wrote in her diary of the Highlands, leaves from which have been published, the following note at Balmo-ral, her favorite seat in Scotland: "Oc-tober 13, 1856. Every year my heart becomes more fixed in this dear Para-dise and so much so now that all has dise, and so much so now that all has dise, and so much so now that all has become my dear Albert's own creation, own work, own building, own laying out, as at Osborne; and his great taste, and the impress of his dear hand have been stamped everywhere. He was been stamped everywhere. He was very busy to-day settling and arranging many things for next year." Words such as these, written during Prince Albert's life-time, afford an eloquent and complete explanation of her long visits to Balmoral in these days.
